Pertinent Facts About Real Estate Assessments.

(BY KEITH NEVILLE).

County Assessor Allen has issued orders to local assessors to base the assessment throughout the County on the present abnormal price of real estate which will mean an increase of more than 100 per cent in taxes. Taxes are levied to raise funds to conduct the governmental agencies of the community and state. Sufficient funds should be raised for these purposes, but it is not policy to provide greater amounts than are necessary. The state constitution provides that all classes of property shall be taxed equally in proportion to their relative values. In theory it does not matter whether the assessment is high and the levy low, or the assessment low and the levy high, the result would be the same. Throughout the history of the state, however, tax officials have held that the interests of the tax payers are best conserved by a low property assessment and as a result the actual value of property in Nebraska has always been fixed at from one-third to one-half of its sale value, the speculative price being disregarded, and as an additional safe guard, the legislature in many instances fixes maximum levies.

In 1919 the total assessment for Lincoln county was approximately $7,000,000.00. The total levy was approximately 129 mills, varying somewhat in different precincts. The amount raised in the taxes therefor was about $180,000.00 based on one-fifth of the actual valuation. The state, school and city levies will be raised for 1920 and according to the best information attainable the total levy will be 150 mills. The amount raised in taxes under the new assessment in 1920 would be therefor approximately $420,000.00. As an argument in favor of a 100 per cent increase in assessment, it is said that sufficient funds are not being raised to properly conduct the business of the city and the school district. If this is true, it is the fault of the public officials and not of the assessment. The maximum general fund levy for the city is 15 mills and only ten mills was levied by the city last year for this fund. In the school district the maximum levy is 100 mills and last year only 42 mills were levied by the commissioners for the city school district. It will therefore be seen that greatly increased revenue would be raised by increasing the levies and that there is absolutely no argument for a greatly increased assessment. The county is the only unit that is running close to the maximum and an increase in assessment of 30 per cent, which will be the average throughout the state, will provide ample funds for it. Many levies are fixed by the legislature and cannot be reduced by state or local officials. An increase in assessment will raise for such funds much more money than would be required. This would be true as to the state capital levy and locally as to the court house levy.

The price that property is bringing at any given time is not a proper basis upon which to establish values for purposes of taxation. The assessment stands for four years and no one can tell what the value of property will be in the future. Levies are fixed yearly. Such a basis has never been used in Nebraska to establish the value of any class of property for purposes of taxation. If an assessor approaches the average property holder and suggests a value a few hundred dollars below what his property might bring in these abnormal times, the owner is apt to think that it is a fair valuation for purposes of taxation. It is not. If the assessment is greater than from one-third to one-half of its speculative value it will be assessed for more than the average of similar property throughout the state. For tax officials to arbitrarily revolutionize the system that has always been in vogue in the taxing of property is inimical to the increase of the taxpayers and it should not be permitted.

I have secured information from counties in every part of Nebraska and find that the increase in most instances will be approximately 30 per cent over the assessment of 1916. While in a few instances, as in this county, a greatly increased assessment is contemplated.

The state board of equalization and assessment, when the returns are in, will strike an average for the state arbitrarily raising counties that are materially below the average, they will not, however, reduce the assessment of counties that are materially above the average and such counties will then pay for the next four years very much more than their proportionate shares of state taxes. It is obvious therefore, that while no injury will accrue to other counties should Lincoln County be below the state average, a very considerable injury will accrue to Lincoln County tax payers should the county be materially above the average for the state.

Figures are not available from precincts out in the county, but I have reliable information that in many instances precinct assessors are using the present abnormal sale price as a basis. In North Platte, assessors in the Third and Fourth wards have not commenced the assessment of real estate. If permitted to follow their own judgment and conscience I believe that they will turn in a fair and equitable valuation; but in the First and Second wards the assessors are fixing the valuation of property generally at from 75 to 300 per cent increase over the previous assessment. Such an assessment is a menace to the future growth and prosperity of the community, for should taxes be based on such an assessment every proposition for civic betterment involving additional taxes will be voted down without question. Rates would also be increased and nothing is more undesirable than to have North Platte acquire the reputation of being a high rent town. The average home owner pays no attention to the assessment of his property until he goes to the office of the treasurer to pay his taxes. It is then too late to secure redress, if his taxes are higher than they should be. It is this class of tax payers that this article is intended to arouse to a realization of the situation that confronts them. The man possessed of considerable property is quite capable of protecting himself from unfair assessment and requires no friendly word of warning.

It is to the interest of every tax payer to find out from the local assessor what value is being placed upon his property. Be sure to ask for the total of house and lot. They are assessed separately. Multiply one-fifth of the assessment by 150 mills to determine the approximate tax for 1920. By referring to the last tax receipt the percentage of increase will be determined. In justice to the county commissioners it must be said that they probably have no knowledge of what is being planned by the county assessor. Commissioners Herminghausen, Springer and Koch have always had the interests of the tax payers at heart and have consistently fought to keep down taxes. That they would favor this excessive and unnecessary tax program is inconceivable. The county treasurer has nothing to do with the assessment of property. His duty is to collect the taxes and he is out spoken in his disapproval of the program of the county assessor.

The time to secure a proper assessment of property in Lincoln county is before the assessment is completed, June 1st. It will be much more inconvenient and will add greatly to the work of the commissioners if the tax payers wait until the commissioners sit as a board of equalization. This revolutionary tax program must be fought to a finish. For it will if it becomes effective mean that Lincoln county will pay approximately 70 per cent more than its share in state taxes.

Following is a list of properties taken at random showing the old and new assessment, the old tax and the estimated tax for 1920. It will be noted that the properties cited are for the most part in the additions to North Platte. The assessors have not yet reached much of the property in the original town. It is probably a coincidence that the county assessors home shows a smaller percentage of increase than any other property listed.
