

Scene at Opening of Democratic Convention

Flashlight photograph taken when the Democratic national convention was called to order in the Civic auditorium in San Francisco. This building is without question the most completely equipped structure for big public gatherings that ever housed a political convention. The elaborate and tasty decorations which clothed the interior of the building are fairly well brought out in the photograph. One of the building's big features is the massive pipe organ shown in the background.

With the U. S. Navy at Vladivostok

The picture shows a view of Vladivostok harbor showing the United States battleship New Orleans in the foreground, a Japanese battleship next, and a Chinese battleship in the rear. The insert shows Admiral A. S. Gleeves, commanding the American naval force.

Londonderry in Throes of Civil War

General view of Londonderry, Ireland, the scene of recent rioting between the Unionists and Nationalists.

Republican Nominees Confer

Senator Warren G. Harding, Republican nominee for president, and Gov. Calvin Coolidge, Republican nominee for vice president, at Senator Harding's desk in the senate office building.

MAKING CANNED SPEECH

Senator Warren G. Harding, Republican presidential nominee, dictating his first speech for a phonograph record. His subject is Americanism and the record will be used in the campaign.

One of the First Submarines

One of the first submarines ever built by John P. Holland, their inventor, of whom it is said that he conceived the idea of submarines as a means of destroying the British navy. Holland was an ardent Fenian and associate of many Irish patriots who have gone down into history. Leaders of the Revolutionary party in Ireland became interested in Holland's idea and commissioned him to build a trial submarine. He built it well enough, but on its trial spin on Long Island Sound it was struck by a coal barge and quickly sunk. The discouraged Irish leaders gave up the idea. Later Holland built his first successful submarine, "The Holland," which was accepted by the United States government in 1897. "The Holland" is here shown on her trial spin.

MASCOT FOR GOV. COX

Al Shurtle, Dayton bootblack, sixty-four years old, who has attended every Democratic rally since 1888, and was Governor Cox's mascot.

Now Making It Up to Her

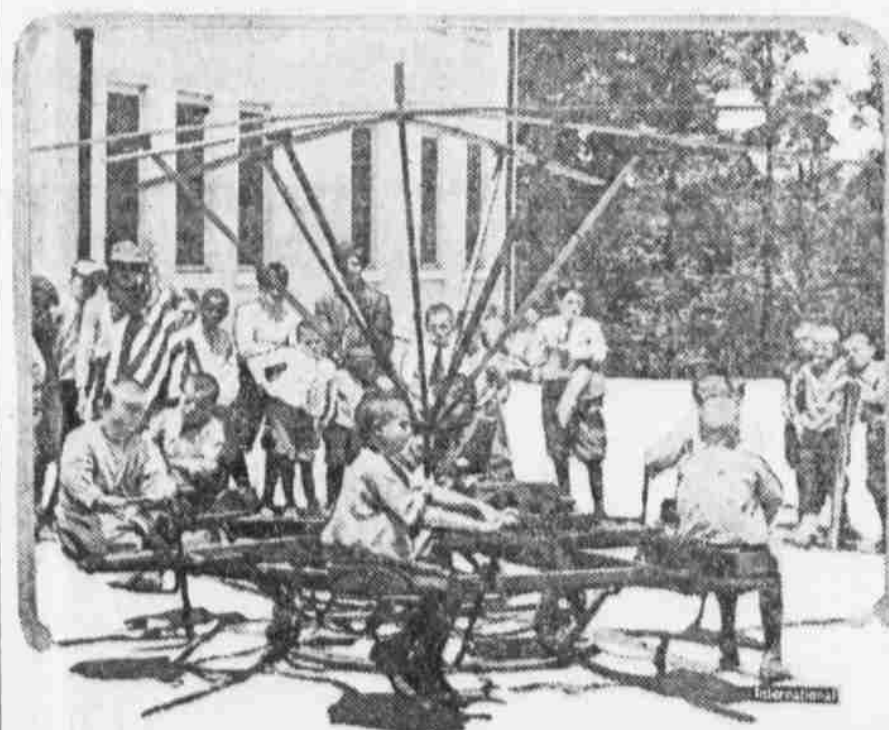

Just to show that the disturbance recently enacted at the opening of the show in London is deeply regretted, the English theater-going public, in tendering to Laurette Taylor many demonstrations of their approval. At a performance a week ago, she was presented with a beautiful wreath of flowers and the boys' band from one of the orphan homes near London played for her.

SPOUSE TOOK HER NAME

Mrs. Alfred O. Corbin of Oenock, Va., is a real helpmeet for her husband. She has just returned to New York on the S. S. Mauretania after a business tour in Holland for her husband, a member of the Wall street firm of Leach & Co. When they were married, each liked Mrs. Corbin's old Virginia name so well that they decided to assume that, instead of the husband's name. She carries two dolls which she brought from Holland for her daughter, aged nineteen. Their names are "Leida" and "Airs."

Crippled Children at Play

Several hundred crippled kiddies are being taught at the St. Charles Home for Crippled Children at Port Jefferson, New York, and how to become useful citizens in spite of their handicaps. The picture shows crippled boys playing on the carousel.

Sports and Public Morals.
There is room for an interesting speculation as to whether the Great Rebellion of the seventeenth century in England might not have been averted, had the policy of the book of sports prevailed, and all classes of the community met on the village green, outside their father's house, Sunday afternoon, in the democratic fellowship of cricket, archery, and bowls. I can not fancy bolshevism propagated between innings, nor sabotage discussed approvingly after a home run; can you?—Living Church,
