EDITORIAL.

Armistice Day promises to be one of the great national holidays and in some places this year its observance will surpass that of the Fourth of July. In most places the American Legion is taking the lead in planning the celebration, assisted by other patriotic and civic societies. In some places the Chamber of Commerce takes the lead with the Legion boys as guests. We suppose that arrangements are being made here for a proper celebration of the day commemorating the time when Germany said "Enough."

The Football game Friday will be played on the local field with Gothenburg High School. In years past the annual struggle with Gothenburg has been one of the features of the school year and especially when it was on the North Platte field.

SCRAPPLE.
 A Column of Nonsense.

The other day when we were going over to George Tekulve's to get our shoes fixed, we met a lady acquaintance of ours who stopped us to ask about a business matter. She got to talking quite lively about the election and giving us kingdom come because we were for the League of Nations. She said she didn't know if she would get to vote or not as most people washed on Monday but when they all had the gas going at the same time, the pressure was so poor that she could not boil her clothes so she always washed on Tuesday and so she couldn't get down town to vote on that day and did we think that election would ever be changed to some other day of the week? Well, we didn't know so we went over to ask Ed Davis. Ed said he didn't know but he would think it could be arranged somehow so the ladies could vote. Ed's Indiana friend was there and he said women had no business voting anyway but he thought the hard working washer women should vote as well as the sofa-pillow girl and he was in favor of fixing it so they all could vote. We suggested they might hire their washing done on that date but Indiana objected. He said that they hired the washing done at his house once and that he never got some of his private clothes back and he never could tell if the wash-woman's man wore them or not. Ed reckoned that it would keep the washer woman from voting if that plan were followed and we said that was just the way we thought. Ed said they might let the washing go that week but we objected to that because some folks smell bad enough as it is and Indiana said they could wash themselves off even if they didn't do the family washing. We said that was right and then we suggested that they might get up early and do the washing before the polls opened but Ed said that would not do at his house as he was opposed to getting up early to do the washing at any time. We asked him why and he said he had heard that washings never got as clean when done in the early morning before time to go to the store as when done in the middle of the day. We had heard that too and we believed it so we said so and Ed said he was glad we agreed to it and we said he might be glad and he might not, we couldn't tell from the way he said it. At that Ed got mad and said he didn't want any insinuations in his store and we got mad and told him we would go out on the sidewalk in front of his store and insinuate all we wished and he said for us to try it and we started but just then a lady came in to buy some thread and Ed looked so anxious to sell her the thread that we didn't try to disturb his sale by insinuating so we got up and went. And now we know.

JOHN R. WORTHLY

John R. Worthly was born on a hill farm at Goffstown, New Hampshire, Dec. 9, 1856. When fourteen years of age he left the hill farm and seeking excitement, went to the Amascog Locomotive Works in the early days of locomotive construction. He spent five years here and then went to Marshall, Mich., where he lived until 1859. At that time he moved to Brookfield, Mo., where he lived for ten years. He was the first City Marshal of Brookfield. At the opening of the Civil War he joined the army and was First Lieutenant of Company G, 38th Regular Missouri Railroad Brigade. He was in charge of the power and equipment on the Hannibal & St. Joe until the close of the war. While in Brookfield he met and married Miss Mary C. Parke, the wedding occurring on Feb. 7, 1861. In 1869 they came to Omaha where Mr. Worthly was in charge of the power in the Union Pacific. He was there three years.

From Omaha he went to Rawlins, Wyo., for a short time and then in 1873 he came to North Platte to take charge of the handling of the power in the Round House. In that capacity he built the first engine around the first boiler built at this point. In 1880 he took up a homestead, living on it and working in the shop at the same time. In 1885 he left the service of the Union Pacific and gave up rail-roading for good. He lived on his ranch and ran a dairy and raised cattle. In 1905 he retired to his home in North Platte. At one time in his early days he was City Councilman of North Platte for two terms but public life did not suit him very well, although he was active in the development of the city and the surrounding country.

From the time he arrived in Omaha until his death he only left the state once. No children came to the home of the Worthlys so in April 1870 they adopted an infant boy and called him John Parke Worthly. During the last few years Mr. Worthly has had poor health and on that account he has been an observer of the development of North Platte rather than an active participant. He leaves his wife, living here, and his adopted son, John Parke Worthly of Portland, Oregon.

In the passing of John R. Worthly, the city has lost an old pioneer and many who knew him have lost a friend.
