

British Exiles in Holland.

"On this spot lived, taught and died John Robinson, 1611-1625"—so reads the inscription on a simple plate in the wall of a picturesque little house in the old town of Leyden.

Suggestion Does Much.

When you come down to breakfast in the morning, to be greeted, perhaps, with the suggestion that you look ill and tired, you may, if you are very suggestible, actually feel ill and tired for the rest of the day, unless you have the sense to counter that unwise suggestion by the opposite one that you are looking well and feel refreshed.

GRAY SAMARITANS RESCUING CHILDREN

The Young Women's Christian Associations of the United States are keenly interested in the movement for the relief of the 3,500,000 starving children of Europe because a group of their members, the Polish Gray Samaritans, have been in charge of distributing food to children in Poland.

In all the relief work being done in Europe, that of the Polish Grays has been unique because all the girls, though sent from America, were either born in Poland or are of Polish parentage. When the need for social service in their country became acute many girls of Polish descent answered the call of the Young Women's Christian Association for overseas service and enlisted in the preliminary training course that was given in several cities of the United States.

They are now spending their entire time in arranging for the feeding of children this winter. Groups of them travel to strategic centers in outlying districts where they set up distributing stations, receive supplies, prepare meals, arrange for impartial distribution and train helpers to continue the work when they are sent on to the next town.

Pleads for Europe's Helpless Children

"They are no more my children than yours," is Herbert Hoover's homely yet eloquent plea for 3,500,000 European children who face incredible tragedy this winter unless America comes to their rescue.

WOULD REMAIN IN BUSINESS

Old Doctor Jones Evidently Was Satisfied That He Could Read His Own Writing.

Old Doctor Jones, who once practiced medicine in a New Jersey town, was known everywhere as a notoriously bad speller. He slipped up on the simplest words, and people wondered how he managed to write prescriptions, especially in medical Latin, so that they could be read and understood.

Everything went well for a long time, then one day the druggist was taken ill and died. His funeral was largely attended and Doctor Jones was one of the principal mourners. What will become of "Doc" now? Who will be get to read his prescriptions? were questions on every one's lips.

RABBIT'S INSTINCT AT FAULT

Probably Would Have Died in Trap From Which It Might Have Escaped With Ease.

I have seen a bird tethered to its breeding place—its feet held fast by the hairs which lined its nest—but, until the other day I had never known or heard of a rabbit being caught in a snare of its own devising, writes an observer of nature.

Wall of Dragons of Peking. The dragon screen of Peking is hidden behind a hillside in the winter palace grounds. It is a wall perhaps 20 feet high and 100 long, faced completely with the east to represent nine large-size dragons in bas relief, of various colors—yellow, purple, buff, maroon, orange—dancing gayly above emerald billows against a pale blue sky. Most sculptured Chinese dragons are lifeless, angular beasts; but here there is an almost un-Chinese vigor and audacity in the spring and twist of the five bodies. They leap, whirl, lunge, and writhe until the spectator steps back, half afraid that they will come tumbling off the screen, striking at the unwary with their sturdy claws. There are, I believe, critics who teach that plastic art should never undertake to portray moments of activity. If this be correct, the dragons stand condemned; but if the sculptor may ever rightly give us life in its vivid, moving moments, here is a masterpiece.—Exchange.
