"I AM CAREFUL"

The man who works on the skeleton steel structural work of a building seems to be in a dangerous position, but the man who must travel the streets of the city in going to and from his work is in more actual danger from this iron worker, because most accidents "are caused by the carelessness of others."
 The ironworker's safety depends upon himself but the safety of the man upon the street depends upon a thousand and one circumstances over which he can have no control.
 The wife may well spend anxious moments at night waiting for the return of a husband who must spend his day amid innumerable chances of accident and injury.
 There is no excuse for having her burdened with additional anxiety about what is to become of the family if the breadwinner does not come.
 No man with a wife waiting for his return should try to do without an accident policy when a large amount of insurance can be obtained for less than seven cents a day in the oldest and strongest of all accident companies.
 No man with a family can afford to leave them unprotected in case of his death by accident.
 No man who depends upon his earnings can afford to be without insurance himself in case of accidental disability.
 The Travelers policies are famous the world over as the standard of what such policies should be. Thousands of business men will have no other.
