The boy problem turns out to be a main problem when it has been run down to the limit. Boys imitate men and they go wrong in most cases because some men lead them wrong. If this is accepted then we know where to place the blame. One generation of good men would revolutionize the world. How can a man sin when he knows some boy is watching him and will do as he does?

The Ottenstein grove in the south part of town is being sold. This announcement by the H. & S. Agency is full of meaning to some people and of only passing interest to others. The editor and his family camped there for a week one summer when the chautauqua was held in the road just south of the grove. Eight or ten other families were camped there at the time and the experience is still a bright spot in our life. Many boys will tell of using this grove as a play ground for games and for climbing. Girls have held picnics there. At one time it was quite a grove but lack of care is responsible for the trees dying. It will soon be only a memory to the older settlers.

NEW SCRAPPLE.

A Column of Nonsense.

Hon. E. S. Davis,
House of Representatives,
Lincoln, Nebr.

Dear Ed:
The other day when we were going over to The Leader to buy something for our wife at his Dutch Sale, a man stopped us and invited us to have dinner with him and his wife the next day. So along about noon we wandered over to his house and knocked at the front door. The hostess came to the door and she was all dressed up in her working clothes, you know, Ed, how women are when they don't expect anyone. We said "How do-do?" and she said "What do you want?" and we said we came to dinner. She said that we would have quite a while to wait and probably we could do something or other at the shop. We said we were pretty hungry and she said she would try and have dinner right on time at six o'clock. And it was then almost noon. Ed, we would like to have you pass a law putting the right names on the different meals. Most people call the first meal of the day breakfast but some people don't eat anything until noon and then want to call that breakfast.

Then again, Ed, they call what we eat at noon lunch when it ought to be called dinner. Some people are not particular what they call it just so they get enough to eat when they want it, but they have never suffered from being invited out as we were.

Then again, Ed, they sometimes call supper dinner. The full force of the law should be brought to bear on such people the more especially when they are inviting people out. I tell you, Ed, it is terrible.

Then again, Ed, the law ought to tell what a luncheon is. Suppose you were invited out to a luncheon, would you know when to go? Some people wouldn't and they might get there too late which would be worse than getting there too early as we did.

Then again, Ed, supper should be supper. A midnight lunch is not supper or else supper does not come at six o'clock. Can a man have supper at six o'clock at home and then have supper with a friend after the show? We say it is an impossibility and we should have a law to keep people from doing impossible things. Of course we don't want you to make it unlawful to eat as many times as there is a chance but every time it should have a name so we would never miss one of these chances by not being on hand.

So, Ed, since we didn't hear anything from you about dredging the Platte, we hope you will pass a law about meals and help us poor editors out when we get invited into society.

Yours truly,
A CONSTITUENT.

A good sized audience witnessed the production of Hobart's "Experience" at the Keith Saturday night. The play was more than one expected and held the audience in close attention from beginning to end. The augmented orchestra, under the special director with the company, rendered music appropriate to the setting of the play. The parts were well taken and the theme was one which appealed to all grown people.

Quinsy Sufferers, Glad to be Well Again.

Quinsy is a kind of glorified sore throat. In quinsy the entire tonsil is transformed into an abscess. The presence of the disease is preceded by a general bodily uneasiness, headache, backache and aching of the arms and legs. The pressure of the swollen and abscessed tonsil (usually but one is affected) may cause deafness and earache. Appetite is gone. Even liquids cause intense swallowing pain. The victim goes on a forced fast. The voice is affected. In from six to eight days the abscess breaks and the disease subsides. The chiropractor finds definite proof that the disease is caused by pressure on nerves at the spinal exit by a nerve tracing. The nerves from the spine to the region in front of and below the angle of the jaw are invariably sore and tender to the touch. When chiropractic spinal adjusting is started at the first inception of the disease the trouble frequently never reaches the abscess stage. The chiropractor in quinsy cases usually adjusts to stimulate the kidneys too. The kidney place adjustments help to bring up to par the bodily power for throwing off the poisons.
