

Edison reveals voice secrets

ONLY 22 singers, out of 3,800, sing pure notes.

Many popular opera and concert stars have serious defects in their voices.

"Stage-personality" enables many a singer of poor voice to gain success as an operatic star.

These amazing facts are told by Mr. Edison in a recent interview on "The Imperfections of the Human Voice." Ask for a copy.

J. O. ANDERSON.

North Platte, Neb., Mar. 9, 1921.
To the Editor of the Tribune:

It seems that most of us went to see "The U. P. Trail." I seldom go to the picture show. It is not because I do not like the "movies." They re-enthras me every time I go with their wonder and possibilities. I simply don't like the pictures—most of them. This title, "The U. P. Trail" looked big and fine to me. I don't know just what I expected. I don't know what the crowd expected, but some way I felt that secretly at least the most of them—something as my boy expressed it—were disappointed because they wanted to see "a train or something."

The title fairly teemed with big things. It stood for the big out-of-doors—for the most wonderful feats of nature and human construction. It stood for creative genius; it stood for keen and concentrated mentality; it stood for herculean physical powers. It stood for beauty and bravery, and it made success mount to the superlative.

Did the production "play up" to the title of the play? Conceding to those who contend that it played fair with history in showing the resorts of the typical "tough town," conceding even to those so called lovers of art, "for art's sake" who insist that art, except it be all tangled and dabbled up with sex license and lawless instincts, is a colorless thing; wasn't it a travesty on facts and on the title?

Wasn't it an affront to our sense of proportions to have ninety per cent of the scenes projected, depict at best the SIDE show instead of the BIG show; the weakness of the undertaking instead of the greatness; the suffling, reeking tawdry abandoned INDOORS of vice, while the title fairly screamed of the big unexplored OUT DOORS of opportunity.

A small boy impatiently whispers "Mamma, who did they keep showing the same picture all the time?" Why indeed.

It made one feel like tugging at her collar in quest of air. This play however was obviously from most standpoints above the average. The actors were among the best.

A big point to be considered is this: do "representative" citizens of North Platte want the movie productions they are getting, or are they merely indifferent except that they have something for diversion?

If we want our children to learn from A to Z of the secrets of vice, we were wont to mention with bated breath, to be schooled in them to the lure of lights and music, if we want our boys to carry away as a permanent impression the thrill of a wounded gunman who dies with a smile on his face, and the words "It is a good thing to be handy with guns sometimes" then we ought not to be storming at city officials because our cities become odorous socially or bristle with holdups.

Better pictures are being made now. We believe North Platte could have them if a demand were made. Some times a really clean picture slips in here. Who is to blame that they are not advertised as such, so that we who like them may not miss them? CLEAN is not a very large word and could well be used oftener in advertising a "Movie."

Some in North Platte want to take away the only day of rest for the picture show operators, that they may have "some place to go" on Sundays. One would think that the greatest calamity we are in danger of is a lack of a place to GO. It is a pitiful cry. It calls for a solution. We would suggest from the way most of us spend our weeks, it wouldn't be amiss to GO HOME (for a change) on Sundays and "wash up," if there is no place else to go.

MARY H. AXTELL.

Why Telephone Rates Are Higher Now

Telephone rates are higher now than they were a few years ago because everything entering into the cost of giving telephone service is greater.

Operating expenses include the wages of employees, the cost of materials used in repairing the property, taxes, interest on the money invested and other miscellaneous expenses.

Each year we have to replace a part of the telephone plant with new equipment and material.

As long as prices stay up the investment in telephone property will be higher each year for each telephone in use than the year before until the plant, which was built when prices were lower, has been entirely replaced.

This greater investment means that slightly higher earnings for each telephone will be necessary from time to time in order to earn a reasonable return on the money invested.
