AN ENGLISH WOMAN ON THE IRISH QUESTION.

North Platte, Nebr.,
March 31, 1921.

Editor of The Tribune:
North Platte, Nebr.
Dear Sir:
Anent your recent editorial regarding the situation in Ireland, the following article, contributed to a recent number of the "London Times" by Lady Sykes, an Englishwoman, may prove of interest to your readers:

"The accepted laws of Christianity and civilization have been set aside, and in their place an attempt is being made to crush the Irish people by methods identical with those employed by the Germans in Belgium, and universally condemned. I have seen for myself some of the destruction wrought by the forces of the Crown, official and unofficial reprisals, upon the Irish population; I have seen the ruins in Cork City, the blackened remains of creameries, of cooperative stores, of houses, in towns and country villages. I have spoken with the mothers of sons who have been shot at sight, without trial; I have seen in a prison hospital a boy of eighteen against whom there was no charge, who had been beaten about the head and body with the butt-ends of rifles till unconscious. I have heard from the lips of a sergeant of police that the place where he was stationed was quiet, but that he had just been out to a village near with some of his men to give a dozen young fellows a good beating.

These things are happening daily, AND OF THE BRUTAL AND FREQUENT MURDERS COMMITTED BY THE BLACK AND TANS NO MENTION IS ALLOWED TO BE MADE IN THE ENGLISH PRESS. Raids and robberies by the military and auxiliaries are of nightly occurrence, entailing cruelty and suffering upon women and children; nobody knows when his turn may come. These things are being done in the name of England. In America and on the continent of Europe our name is becoming a byword. Has the war so blunted our sensitiveness that we do not feel the disgrace that is being laid upon us? Is it not time for the people of England to rise up in their wrath, and insist that their elected representatives shall put an immediate end to these shameful deeds that are being done in their name?"

The Italics are mine.
Yours truly,
PATRICK McDAID.
