EDITORIAL

There will be no band concert this evening on account of the Chautauqua.

This issue of the Tribune is issued too late to announce any of the closing Chautauqua numbers. Tonight the play "Too Much Business" will be given. It is a winner wherever given and will please all who attend.

J. K. Stickler, rail inspector for the Union Pacific has written local friends that the extension of the North branch into Wyoming is now within 1 1/2 miles of Lyman and that trains will be running into Lyman by September 1st.

Central Labor Union is at work on its program for Labor Day but the complete plans will not be announced for a day or two. It is known that there will be a ball game and a dance. There is talk of a parade, some sports and picnic dinner and boxing match, but these have not been worked out. So many men have been out of employment and so much time has been lost that those who have jobs are not anxious to lay off unless the day is to be worth while.

Reports from the Platte River Round-Up which was held at the John Harshfield ranch northwest of Sutherland are that the attendance was greater than had been expected. Some of those who attended returned with glowing accounts of the program. Tourists came from several states and many camped there during the whole of the three days. Quite a number of North Platte people were there but most of them just went up for the day. They claim that the scenes were quite realistic and well carried out. The ground was especially favorable for the show and the setting very pleasing. The report is that those interested are to start right in planning for a bigger and better show next year.

Football is again in the air. Keith Neville has his plans pretty well lined up and they are all working toward a good team. Suits have been offered, old equipment and material has been gone over and sorted up and the schedule has been almost completed. Practically all of the boys of last year's team who did not graduate will be in the line up this year, while substitutes and second team men of last year are "rarin' to go." Groups of high school fellows can be seen in the evening and those near enough can catch bits of conversation and discussion which is mostly about football.

Woman's suffrage has had a serious setback in the eyes of a good many people who were enthusiastic supporters of the rights of the women to vote. In the bridge bond election last week it is stated that here in North Platte, there were less than 40 women who cast votes. One man said that the only time women want to vote is to get even with some candidate or to boost some relative into office. While the men did not do very well at the polls yet they cast more than nine times as many ballots here in North Platte as did the women and there are about the same number of men and women voters in the city. One woman when asked if she voted for the bridge bond said she didn't vote as she had all the bridge she could handle. She said a whole house full of ladies spent the afternoon at bridge. The nations of the old world are still in a turmoil, fighting and struggling for the right of suffrage while we in America who have this right are neglectful in using it.

Mr. and Mrs. John Halligan returned yesterday from a month spent in the lake country of northern Minnesota. They visited Duluth and from there went north and west visiting the summer resorts and stopping where there was promise of interesting times. Mr. Halligan had his fishing tackle along and had considerable sport with bass fishing at several places.

When Elmer W. Wilken age 19 and Miss Marie L. Brisbin age 16 applied to Judge Woodhurst Tuesday for a marriage license, he told them he could not grant one unless he had the consent of the parents. They had set their heads on getting married and it was then about four o'clock in the afternoon and their parents lived near Dickens. Nothing daunted, they turned the car south, got father Wilken and father Brisbin and a bunch of chums and were back in North Platte that night about nine o'clock. The Judge was summoned and with the consent of the parents, he performed the ceremony.

News items in Kearney papers tell of the sudden death in Chicago of Miss Helen Adair of Kearney. She was the daughter of W. S. Adair, founder of the City National Bank at that place and a sister of William Adair, who is well known here. Miss Adair had visited in North Platte and had many friends and acquaintances here. In telling of the death the Kearney Hub says: "Saturday afternoon Dan Morris received telegraphic communication from the attending physicians that the condition of Miss Adair was such there was little hope of saving her life. In her last hours she sought solace in the presence of her brother, William Adair, and Mr. Morris was appealed to in an effort to locate the latter. The search extended the width and breadth of the country but was in vain and up to noon today no trace of the brother had been found, although every clue to his whereabouts was run down."
