EDITORIAL

We have heard something of the possibility of organizing a business women's club here in North Platte after the holidays. There is nothing definite yet but the suggestion has been made and will probably be given some consideration if someone starts the movement. There are over 350 women in business in North Platte according to recent figures and it is urged that they have some problems in common which could be worked out to advantage if they had an organization. One enthusiast has even suggested that club rooms should be secured for the use of the business women when they are off duty.

Elsewhere we are giving an account of the new school building which is just completed in District 31. The "little red schoolhouse" of the New England hills was followed by the "little white crackerbox" of the Nebraska plains but both of these are giving way to the modern community building which serves the needs of the elders as well as the children. The people of District 31 are to be congratulated on their enterprise in putting up such a building which will serve as a model for other buildings to be put up in other districts. Country life in District 31 should be sweeter and happier for the opportunity of getting together under such favorable surroundings.

The editor was given a special invitation to attend the labor talk at the Labor Temple Tuesday evening and accepted. We enjoyed the evening. There was probably not a thinking man who heard the lecture who agreed with everything the speaker said. We certainly did not because there were a number of things spoken about that we had never heard of before and so we could not agree until we had had time to investigate and think them out. But there were enough good things about the lecture that we knew were right that we approved of it as a whole. The speaker was not radical nor was he radical. He did not utter a word that was unpractical nor one that ladies could not properly have heard. He was a plain, forceful speaker who had a message to give railroad men and other workers and he gave it and the men approved. He talked class just as the Methodists talk class and the doctors talk class and the farmers talk class. He was for the laboring man and for him good and strong. It would do most of our citizens a lot of good to hear just such lectures every once in awhile and we would urge the labor side of such questions at a public meeting and we promise to be there.
