

FIRST TEMPLE OF AGRICULTURE

The farmers of Dona Ana county, New Mexico, have built the above Temple of Agriculture, the first in the world, at a cost of $10,000. It houses the offices of the Elephant Butte Irrigation district, the farm bureau offices and the offices of the cooperative marketing association. The inset is Mr. H. H. Brook, president of the Irrigation district, who led in the temple project.

COMES HOME

Albert Ginapp took No. 4 Monday night for Omaha, where he went to meet his sister, Margaret. Miss Ginapp has been teaching school at Louisville, Ky., and recently underwent an operation for appendicitis. The doctors advised her to give up her school work and go home and take a good rest.—Brady Vindicator.

W. B. Smith, manager of the Lincoln Highway Garage in Paxton advises us that the pumping of all the water for the village system is done by the power furnished by a Fordson tractor, and that the arrangement is satisfactory and economical.—Keith County News.

Thirty-six thousand tons of beets were harvested this year in the Hershey, Nichols, Birdwood and North Platte territory. This is the American Beet Sugar Co. territory. Two hundred and thirty-four thousand dollars thrown into this area this year has materially helped out our growers.—Hershey Times.

DISTRICT COURT

Judge Eldred is presiding over district court this week during the absence of Judge Teweil. The latter was called to Lincoln to act in the capacity of supreme judge for a week or two, which is one of the uses to which district judges may be put by reason of the new constitution adopted by Nebraska a few months ago.—Lexington Clipper-Citizen.

The Community Literary society held forth at Congregational church in Arthur last Tuesday evening, with the usual large attendance present. The question debated: "Are Dairy Cows more valuable to Arthur county than stock cows?" The cows won in a walk with Meth and Floyd Dorris doing the milking while for the stock or mother cow, was ably upheld by R. H. Barber and Ted Lightbody. Judges were Mrs. Fred Heath, Oren Cowen and Roy Smith.—Arthur Enterprise.

There is a movement on foot to have five commissioners on the county board. Last week the North Platte Tribune published an article addressed to the editor from a resident taxpayer of Brady endorsing this plan. The writer of the article claims to have lived in the county about forty years. It looks reasonable that a county the size of Lincoln with all its road improvements going on would be easier looked after with two more commissioners. The voters of the county will probably have a chance to vote on the proposition in the future.—Brady Vindicator.

TRY FOR CONVENTION

Every citizen should be behind the Volunteer Fire department in their efforts to secure the 1923 convention for this city. The boys are going east with that purpose in mind. There is no reason why Sidney should not be the convention city of 1923, for while the boys have attended twelve state conventions they have never asked for it to come here before. Not because we could not have cared for them before, but because the preponderance of invitations seemed to be to the east. However, now Sidney feels that her long patience should be rewarded by the support of many delegates who have had their turn in the past. Anyway the delegates are going down loaded with pep and propaganda to bring back the convention if it is within the possibilities. They will go to arrive in Columbus at 9 o'clock on the morning of the 16th and the Columbus fire department will take them in hand and give them a jolly day before going over to Norfolk.—Sidney Telegraph.

A DIFFERENCE

"Where is the mother of that child?" A rough man exclaimed at last, when he could endure no longer the mourning and crying of a little child; and he voiced the sentiments of all in the pullman. "In the baggage car in her coffin," replied the tired woman who was caring for the little one.

A change came over that car. There was no more complaint. The women vied with each other in caring for the little thing which fell asleep in one of their arms. When in the night the child awoke and cried for its "mamma," it was the big rough man that walked up and down the aisle until it fell asleep on his shoulder, and, as tenderly as a woman, he placed it in the tired nurse's arms in a sleep unbroken through the long night.

It did make a difference. It does make a difference. If we could but know what is behind that nervousness, that word that irritates, that tone of voice that sets on edge, if we could know how near a nervous breakdown a true and kind heart is; the back ache, headache, heartache; what is the strain that life is under that very moment—what sorrow or injury, or loneliness, or broken hope, and particularly, how sorry they are afterward, it is more than conceivable we would be patient, respectful, appreciative, and kind. But, alas, we do not know the load they have to bear. We are gruff, unfeeling; we would be otherwise, if we understood.—Central Advocate.

BROODER DISTRICT DOINGS

The Literary Society has a goose to pick with the weather man for sending such an awful brand of weather last Friday which spoiled their meeting.

Little Paul Mooney has been quite sick for several days. He had a tooth pulled and a cold settled in it. He is under the doctor's care.

William Broeder of Call is visiting his parents Mr. and Mrs. Carl Broeder and other relatives and friends here during the holidays.

Ed Chittenden is carefully nursing a sore jaw caused by a sore tooth.

Dorothy Orton spent the week end in North Platte visiting her teacher, Mrs. Chas. LaVelle and trying to get a glimpse of Santa Claus.

Our teacher gave the children a treat and a taffy-pull on Friday afternoon before vacation. The children had a fine time and appreciated it.

Jack Frost has been on a rampage during the past few days and everyone is staying indoors as much as he can for fear Jack Frost will get him and pinch his nose and bite his toes. Oh you weatherman! Shame on you!

ONE OF THEM TELLS THE STORY OF A BOY SCOUT HIKE

Last Saturday seventy-five scouts answered roll call in front of the Franklin building and lined up for the hike. The line of march was by twos with the senior patrol leaders in charge. Several boys were detained from going on account of not being scouts. They had some of their tenderfoot work done but a boy is not a scout until he has completed the tenderfoot test and is registered at the scout office. A halt was called at the dairy barn of the experimental station and water was taken for the next lav. The field south of the experimental station orchard was the place where the final halt was called. The scouts sat down in a circle and some instructions about fire prevention were given and how to fight a fire in doors and out of doors. Some signals to be used with a whistle or bugle were taught and tried out. All scouts desiring to do so had a chance to try for the page test before dinner. About half of those trying passed. The dinner signal was the one the lads were all listening for. When it blew they all fell to and built their fires and cooked their dinner. The scout masters were the ones to suffer now as it was necessary for them to taste all the meat that was supposed to be cooked. After an hour of feasting the test work was resumed and games were played. At four o'clock the march homeward was begun and again it was necessary to stop at the dairy barn for liquid. There was a happy surprise in store this time as the gentleman in charge of the dairy sat a big pail of milk out and it is needless to say that it was consumed in short order. Just after we had lined up to start the final lap home another gentleman offered to set out a can of milk but it was getting late and the sun was commencing to near the horizon so the most welcome offer was refused. It was just about dark when the starting point of the hike was reached and the seventy-five scouts sought their homes for some of mothers cooking. The hike was a first class success with but one exception and that was that some of the scouts insisted upon thinking that they knew what to do better than the leaders for which they will have to have the consideration of the scout court.

Miss Mary Temple arrived home Saturday from Lincoln to spend Christmas with her parents Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Temple.

Mrs. Elvin Sterling of San Francisco who is a guest at the home of her brother Thos. Bolan and Mr. and Mrs. Bolan left Saturday for Elm Creek to spend Christmas.
