THIS AMERICAN NAPOLEON MAY SOON BE A REAL KING

The little country of Albania, whose complete freedom has been assured by the League of Nations, has asked Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, of Baltimore, Md., to come over and be their king. He is considering the matter. The above is a photograph of Jerome himself and his wife. His great grandfather was a brother of Napoleon I, and married Miss Patterson of Baltimore.

SMILES

Years ago, I remember being caught by the old riddle in connection with this word.

Why is smiles the longest word in the English language?

Because, there is a "mile" between the first and last letter.

The further I go in business, the more I like to think about the mile of goodness in the word smiles. It means so much. How much further a man can travel in a day with a smile, than he can travel in a day with a frown. How much further a man can see along the road of opportunity with a smile, than he can with a frown. Start up that mountain of business success, that mountain of good deeds, that mountain of accomplishments or that mountain of hopes for the future. Notice those who have the smiles and see how many miles they are in advance of those with the frown.

With the man who smiles, darkness creeps into dawn, the dawn blossoms into the full day and the full day fades into a glorious starlit night. There seems to be no more darkness, anywhere, once the smile is real. And so, time floats by, mile after mile of it, in happy content with the man who can smile honestly. Meanwhile the man with the frown is groping hopelessly in the dark.

If I were asked what should be the sixth sense, and most valuable of all to the general welfare of mankind, I believe I would answer—smiling.—Business Chat.

A SUGGESTION

At the last regular meeting of the McCook Commercial club, several new members were admitted into the club. It was announced that the board of directors had guaranteed the expense of a community Christmas tree and that arrangements were being made to give every child a real treat. A committee of three with the president as chairman was appointed to audit the books of the club for the year and a motion was carried to ask the Temple board to redecorate the club rooms and also that the house committee buy additional furniture for the club rooms. Superintendent True of the city school was present and suggested that the club join the school this year in issuing a high school annual, including twenty-five pages of literature regarding McCook generally and increasing the number of copies from 300 to some 1,000. This question was favorably discussed and will be taken up further at the annual meeting January 10—Trade Review.

WHY NOT?

We venture to say that in every home in Ironton, or in the state for that matter, there are many things which are not needed and are not used. They are, therefore, of no value to the members of the household. They are hung onto, like a miser hangs onto the things that he knows are of no use to him. They could be given away—to somebody to whom they would be of value. This is true of books and furniture and ornaments and clothing.

Some of these days we are going to learn the art of getting rid of something we do not need for something we could use to advantage. We are going to learn to anticipate the other fellow's wants and measure our own by them. We are going to learn that a fair exchange is perfectly legitimate in the eyes of business and we are going to have a keener eye for business. The only reason we have the cellar or the attic or lumber room littered up now with things we do not need, but which the other fellow would like to have, is because we have not learned to ask him, what he needs, and what he has to exchange for it.

Almost everybody reads the home town papers these days. There then is the solution to the problem. Drop a few lines, at the cost of a few cents, in the home town paper, and tell your neighbors what you have that is no longer useful to you, but which you will gladly sell at a fair price, or exchange for something you are in a position to use. Nine times out of ten, as a rule, you'll find some one seeking that very thing. The fact that it costs but a few cents to try this makes it worth thinking about.—News, Ironton, Minn.

Dr. J. S. Simms transacted business in Maxwell Friday.
