SHRINE

At about 5 o'clock Thursday evening it looked as if all the good looking folks in town were leaving by way of the U. P. "Dressed up?" the toggerly shops must have had their inning. New Doug Fairbanks shoes on Al Wambach, folks we never saw dressed up before, feathers in their hats, button-hole bouquets, and musk on themselves! Just one grand parade.

We ran out of our sty to find out what everybody was seeing, and got bumped off the thoroughfare by some Shrinees who squeaked, "Disappear Santa Claus. Don't you know this is Fez night at North Platte?" But we got out hat and chased along at a respectful distance, doing our bit to keep right end up on the slippery pavement, figuring them up as they slid by. In pulled old 25 with every window filled with some of our friends from other towns that we had considered steady for common sense. The Skades from Lexington, the Hords, Fords, Smiths, Cocks and Allens from Cozad, and then our Gothenburg Tehame's began to scramble aboard. Counting as fast as we could we had forty-two when Booker started running along the windows hunting his wife. "Are you on? Where is she?" We don't know how many we missed, but with the disappearance of John Jennings' coat-tail around the Vroman curve we had spotted forty seven of them. We our weary steps home, wishing that common folk might have a holiday, but—

We haven't any Shrine.
And we haven't any Fez.
We haven't any sweetheart.
So we couldn't do the jazz.
But ther's one thing gosh larned certain,
If our heart was young again,
We would worship in a Temple,
In the heart of War Whoop Land!
Well, we didn't sit up to see them come home, but Friday morning found them all here, every man at his post natural like, all out Stanley Erb. He spoke to us about not mentioning 'ris, but in justice to ourselves we cannot conceal our pride when Goddenburg wins and we are just as puffed up as Statler is to know that up there in competition where high stepping is studied art, and the wild woman from Borneo set the pace, our own Stanley took first prize, a pot of jam, for classy interpretation of the Wanowski's ex-Patrol, with the graceful hither and yon of a two step learned in Gothenburg.

And how they do talk about the affairs, music, vaudeville, eats, flowers and fire crackers, with confette and good fellowship. And today it is the Thanatopsis of the Shriner.

So live, that when thy time draws nigh to join
The innumerable Caravan, which moves
To that mysterious desert, where each must
Burn his feet on the blistering desert sand,
Thou go not, like a humble servant,
Driven to his task, but, sustained and encouraged,

By the comforting thought, that all things must end,
Bravely take the medicine given by former red-caped arrivals,
And then—the down pleasant dreams!

The Days of Old, the Days of Gold, the Days of '49!
—And under a giant redwood, on a wild Sierra slope, a little troupe of wandering minstrels.
A trembling girl, with a violin, playing "Nelly Gray."
A band of outlaws listening.
Then—the spell is broken!—the demon awakes!—"Who shall take her?"—A maddening battle!—The bandit leader wins, and—
The rest is a song of a soul's regeneration.
