

THE WINDOW

By AGNES G. BROGAN

Jack Thorpe, hurrying along through the chill of an early spring day, glanced up at an old stone mansion and saw the window. The window seemed to typify that home he desired.

In crying contrast to its neighboring windows, the shining white curtained glass beckoned, while two potted geraniums flagged a welcome.

Jack was tired of hotels, tired of disappointing bachelor apartments, and though he had not passed down Cooper road with the intention of finding a lodging place there, that is exactly what he did, and for this was the gay little window responsible.

"Will you," he briefly asked a maid who opened the door to him, "let me know if the room on the second floor is vacant, the one with red flowers in the window? And may I see it?"

Jack ascended the gloomy stairway upon being told that the room was to be vacated the following morning. The maid inserted a key in a lock and left him.

The room was as inviting as its window promised. When Thorpe lighted the lamp and touched a match to the gas grate, he sank into a cretonne cushioned chair with a grateful sigh. Here was real home at last.

Mrs. Bickers came up presently for an interview. The bright place on the wall paper, she informed him, was where the former tenant's piano had stood. The piano had been moved that morning.

The room would be ready for renting tomorrow, Mrs. Bickers agreed, and he paid the advanced price asked. "Just leave the key on the hall rack when you go out," Mrs. Bickers said, and left him.

He was enjoying a cigar before the glowing fire when a tap sounded at the door and in response to his questioning "Yes?" the door opened to admit a young woman. She was a pale-faced young woman and her big blue eyes were brimming with tears.

"What do you want?" asked Jack impatiently.

"I want to come in," she retorted. Uninvited, she drew a companion chair to the fireside and was, apparently, soon lost in thought.

"I," said Jack informingly, "have just rented this room."

The girl turned to look at him.

"Have you?" she asked. "I hope you will like it."

"I know that I shall like it," he replied. "I knew from the moment I saw those red geraniums in the window."

The freelight induced Jack's reminiscence.

"We used to have a window like that at home, when I was a boy. White ruffled curtains and all. It looked out on the side of the garden where a sun dial stood."

"Did you?" asked the girl eagerly.

"We had a window like it, too, at Grandma's. Grandma raised us motherless children. But our window looked out from a sunny kitchen to where we could see birds hopping about on the trees, and in winter time, their little tracks all over the snow."

The man nodded understandingly.

"I know, that all spells home," the girl said. "Better go outside for them—it's too bad you have to."

"Oh, well, there must be some drawback. One does not find a home every day."

"Nor lose one, thank goodness," sighed the girl.

With new interest he regarded the strange visitor.

"I lost mine today," she explained ruefully.

"But why?" Sympathy was in his glance.

"Couldn't pay the rent," the girl told him. "If I can't make another home for myself there will always be grandma's to go to," she added.

"Tell me," he begged impulsively.

"Grandma educates her orphaned grandchildren and then turns us out of her over-full nest to make our own ways. My way was to be music—fame, success, you understand, waiting in the world outside. I have just two dollars left. I'm going to stop at a 'Y. W.' tonight, and tomorrow go out and look for an ordinary job. The trouble is, I don't know a thing in the world but music."

"Your name?" the man asked, "won't you tell me your name?"

"Burnie," answered the girl, her sweet face grew wistful. "Back in grandma's cottage they call me Margot."

With a sudden gesture she tossed her hat and cloak to a chair. "I'll get out my tea wagon and have tea. And you'll stay? It will be a sort of celebration, the old tenant departs, long live the new."

Some new, inexplicable desire held Jack Thorpe longingly in the gayly cushioned chair.

"I'm installing a new music store right here in Cooper road," he told her later, "and with your experience along that line, I'd be glad to offer you a position in it. It might do for a time, Margot," the name came naturally, "and you could then continue on in this little home you have made. Your piano could be brought back tomorrow. The new tenant declines—re-instate the old."

And Margot happily agreed.

Now grandma, proud and gratified, tells the folks of Linden Village how Margot gave up her promised career for love, with the saving grace that she married "a music man."

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

I will make the season with my Jack, Blue John at my barn at 109 E. Ninth St. He has proved himself to be first class. I will be glad to show mules with any Jack in the state so come and pay Blue John a visit. You will all wish that you had some of his mules to sell in a few years. Blue Jack's mules top the market. Our terms at $12.50 to insure a mule to stand and suck. I also have my Percheron horse that has proved himself a breeder. Terms $8 for a colt to stand and suck.

GEO. MCKAIN.
