Dame Fashion Cries:
"Comfort"

Today the fashion magazines pay flattering attention to proper shoes; for not only have thoughtful women discovered the greater value of efficient shoes and the comfort that comes from wearing them, but Dame Fashion herself has placed the seal of approval on Cantilever Shoes.

Their medium rounded toes—"comfortable toes" as one society writer described them; their well placed heels of proper height; their snug fitting, restful instep; their flexible arch, easing the foot in action and inducing grace in walking—all these Cantilever Shoe features tend to improve a woman's health and her appearance, her peace of mind and her charm of manner.

No wonder that Fashion has created a new requirement in woman's correct attire; sensible walking shoes for daytime. The high French heel and sharp toe are confined to dancing and formal dress. Let us show you these Cantilever Shoes. You will like to wear them. They make you feel so happy.

JOHN F. HINMAN

John Hinman was born March 13, 1840 in Bradford county, Pennsylvania and died April 13, 1922 at the home of his nephew, Curt Hinman, in this city.

Mr. Hinman was the last of eleven children of Abner Curtis and Augusta York Hinman, all of whom barring accidents lived to a good old age. Two of his brothers, James and William, were killed in the Civil war. He was descended from Sargeant Edward Hinman born in 1620, who was called the Pilgrim of Strafford, who was the first of the Episcopallians in Connecticut and signed the first petition to sift the churchmen from the Congregationalists. The Hinman family was a family of pioneers—first in Connecticut, then in Pennsylvania and finally across the country to Nebraska. His grandfather, Manassah York, was the first Presbyterian minister in the state of Pennsylvania and the first Presbyterian church in that state was organized in his mother's house. His father, Abner Curtis Hinman, was a prominent temperance worker, having been Grand Master of the Order of Good Templars for the state of Pennsylvania for a number of years. There was just sixty-one years to a day between the death of John Hinman and his father.

He came to Lincoln county in the 60's and settled near Fort McPherson but later went to Texas where he joined with Benj. Hyatt in building railroad bridges between Houston and San Antonio. Later he married Augusta Elizabeth Hyatt, daughter of his partner, and in 1877 returned to Lincoln county. In 1878 he joined the North Platte Home Guards and was called out to help run down some thieving Indians. The guards came up with the Indians on the upper Birdwood and John Hinman saw real fighting. He became a building contractor and erected the following structures down town in addition to many residences: All the Keith buildings, the B. I. Hinman block on Front street, the Waltemath building on Sixth street, the Telegraph building on West Front, the Hinman block on Dewey, the Ritner hotel, and the buildings now occupied by Marti's Market, the Dixon stores, and the ideal bakery.

In 1896 Mr. Hinman was called upon to suffer the death of his wife, who had been unable to walk for twelve years before that, on account of the results of being thrown from a horse. His unwavering care and devotion to her and her memory is one of the most beautiful points of his character. Their only child, now Mrs. Maude Helmond, lives in California.

The funeral services were held at the Episcopal church in this city at 2:30, April 17, and were conducted by Rev. W. H. Moore. At the cemetery the Masons were in charge of the services, Mr. Hinman being a member of both the Blue Lodge and the Commandery.

He was an old timer who left his impress on the early days of North Platte and Lincoln county and whose passing recalls the great service rendered by these pioneers.
