We heard several times that the races were to be fakes because when the time came there would be no one here but Rhiley so we surprised Manager Crawford in his office the other day and asked him to see the contracts. He went to his vault and took out a file and handed them to us. We looked through them and can certify that they are as advertised. Abbott, Boling, Green, Kirchuber, Mals, Moon, Vail, Priestauer, Bullock and Rhiley. So that he is nalled.

An item from this paper some time ago regarding the management of the J. C. Penny Co. store here was true at the time but is not true now. Frank de Bauernfeld is to take the new store at Centerville, Iowa and H. J. Rathman is to remain as manager of the store here. A change of plans at the central office brought this about after it seemed certain that the plan announced first had been adopted. The Editor regrets to see either of these gentlemen leave here but is glad one of them is to remain. Both have shown themselves to be gentlemen of the finest type.

We usually think of the bad boy as stealing bird eggs but Scouting is putting a stop to that and just as we thought the birds were going to be given a chance, there comes a tale of a group of girls who are reported to have returned to town one day very recently with their hands full of bird eggs. If they knew that the fine is $100 for each nest destroyed they might let the birds alone through fear; if they knew the number of harmful insects these birds destroyed annually they might let the birds alone through duty or if they knew that some birds actually die of a broken heart as it were when their nest is destroyed, they might let the birds alone through pity. We can't believe they are real American girls who are informed as to the matter or they would not take bird eggs. We would almost guarantee they were not Campfire girls.

The attendance at the Skovgaard concert, Tuesday night was disappointing. A number of prominent supporters of the beat in music were not there and were missed. This concert was one of the best in North Platte for some time. There was not a dull minute in the program only between numbers. Mrs. Skovgaard won the admiration of the audience with her brilliant work on the piano, quite as much if not a little more than did her husband on the violin. It was a treat to be long remembered and enjoyed in the remembering. The people of the Christian church who undertook the management of this concert certainly deserve the commendation of the music loving people of this community.

This is the time of the iris. No more brilliant flower blooms here in spring and they grow in almost every yard. The iris or flag as it is commonly called, is one of the hardy plants which can be raised under the worst conditions we have here and it should be generally planted. Flower lovers could well form an Iris club and by exchanges of the roots and an annual exhibition of bloom, they could promote the culture of the newer and finer varieties and thus beautify the city and add joy to the lives of the people.
