It was reported on the streets that the North Platte Chamber of Commerce is trying to buy off the other auto drivers for the Fourth of July races so that King Rhiley will win.

The editor recently accompanied T. M. Cohagen on a trip over the new graded highway south to Wellfleet. We saw men at work at different places along the route—some with grading tools lowering the hills and filling up the draws; others were making new roads over the level places. The aim is to have a straight, level, hard road from North Platte to the south boundary of the county and the commissioners are going as far toward accomplishing that aim as they can with the money they have on hand. That part of the road which is finished is certainly an improvement over the road which has been used heretofore.

The Tribune acknowledges receiving a well prepared report of the state convention of War Mothers at Omaha from Mrs. Frank R. Baker, corresponding secretary of the state organization. Another account covering much the same ground had been handed to us in time for the last issue and by this time Mrs. Baker and the other officers and members of the War Mothers will have read the account. The convention is reported to have been very successful from every point of view and now we are all ready to begin preparation in any way we can for the next year's convention at North Platte.
