NEW PLAN OF REPARATIONS

Canada Decides to Oppose Subject of a Waterways Project for Present at Least

Washington, D. C.-Rearrangement of the present scheme of German reparations is to be expected if tangible results are achieved by the conference of international bankers now discussing a loan to Germany at the Hague, in the opinion of high government officials.

Officials in close touch with financial and economic developments in this country and abroad expressed the view which was coincided in by Secretary Mellon, that a German bond issue could not be floated in the United States, which would be looked to for most of the loan, unless attractive security is offered for the investment of American money in German obligations.

Laying aside political considerations involved in a possible rearrangement of reparations payment, and basing their conclusions upon money market conditions in this country, officials assert that unless bonds issued under the terms of an international loan to Germany were to have priority in German revenues as security in preference to the existing reparation bonds, very few of the new obligations would be absorbed in the American market.

Ocean Front Upon Round Porcupine, Lafayette National Park.

Lafayette National park, on Mount Desert island in Maine, is one of the latest parks to be created by the federal government, and is the only national park in the East. But if young In its status as a park, it is physically one of the oldest parts of America. Its granite mountains were standing out against the ice and frost, the rains and waves, millions of years before the Rockies and the other ranges of the West had risen above the prehistoric seas that covered that part of the continent. It is the peak of the Atlantic coast-line of the United States—the one spot on the eastern coast south of the St. Lawrence where what may truly be called mountains

It is appropriate that the national park on Mount Desert Island should the French played an important part in the earliest history of the island. It was the first land to be approached and named-"Isle des Monts Deserts" -in the earliest recorded voyage of exploration made along the coast of Maine to the east of Kennebec. Champlain sailed down this unknown coast in September, 1604, passing isle and headland until he saw rising boldly ahead the range of the Mount Desert hills with their bare rock peaks and deep, ice-gouged, dividing valleys. Feeling that he had come upon something worthy of closer examination, he anchored in what has since been called Frenchman's bay, a fine body of water that lies between the island and the shore to the east. By making friends with the Indians. Champlain laid the foundations the following day for the French colony which was later to occupy the island.

The fame of the beautiful Isle des Monts Deserts was carried back to France, but it was not until 1613 that an opportunity was found to settle there the proposed colony. The little ship which brought to Mount Desert its load of colonists with their seedgrain, food supplies, implements and north, including the Arctic. And in live-stock, has been called "the French Mayflower." The voyagers landed on the east coast, not far, perhaps, from the site of Bar Harbor. Later they moved to the shores of a cove on the south side of the Island.

Unfortunately, "the French Mayflower" was not destined to be responsible for a permanent settlement as was its British counterpart. After the colony had lived only a few years, a British fleet came and wrecked it. Permanent settlement was first begun from the American colonies in 1761.

Entire Island Not in Park.

Mount Desert island lies off the Maine coast in about the latitude of Minneapolis and St. Paul, and is some 300 miles northeast of New York. It has many indentations, but may be roughly described as 15 miles long and 12 miles wide. It is connected with the mainland by a bridge utilizing an island in the narrows.

Lafavette park does not embrace the entire island. The town of Bar Harbor, an important summer resort, is situated on the eastern shore of the island, and numerous privately owned estates and resort villages nestle in coves along the coast. The park does contain, though, the greater part of Mount Desert's outstanding feature, the range of granite mountains, in places rising above 1,000 feet, which stretch across the island. Excellent ocean-side drives are all about this rugged peak; and over its hills and along its sheer cliffs and smooth domes have been constructed paths and iron ladders in order that the climber may reach its vantage points mountain and sea scenery, a combina- Globe.

(Prepared by the National Geographic tion seldom found in the east. On the Society, ashington, D. C.) south shore is the only true Atlantic flord on United States territory, Somes sound. Among the hills are a number of narrow sparkling lakes, filling basins scooped out of the rock by the powerful grinding force of glaciers ages ago.

All lovers of birds and plant life can find an interest in Lafayette National park aside from its beautiful scenery and the climbing it affords. It is wonderfully fitted to be a great nesting and feeding ground for both land and water birds. This is true. too, of course, of the adjoining islands and coast. So numerous are the indentations that the tide washes fully 2,500 miles of shore from Casco Bay north to Canada. All along the coast are to be found extensive flats and salt marshes, flooded twice a day by tides. At Mount Desert these tides rise 12 feet or more: and each leaves deposited on the flats of the island much floating marine life, and contributes to the growth of fixed vegetable and animal forms. In this way Nature really sets a gigantic table for the birds, Bird Life Sadly Depleted.

But unfortunately private control of many of the islands and coast flats, and more or less promiscuous shooting and nest destruction have greatly depleted the bird life along the Maine coast until now only a pitiable remnant is left of the flocks observed by early explorers. One of the results looked for by the creation of the Lafayette park and the extension which it is believed it will undergo, is the protection of bird life, and the gradual restoration of larger flocks.

This matter of bird protection at Mount Desert is made easier by the fact that perhaps no other area in the northeast in the line of important migrations is better fitted to grow a great variety of fruiting plants for bird food. On the exposed portions of the islands, both headlands and bogs, are found numerous species of plants typical of the regions of the sheltered nooks are scores of plants that there reach their extreme northern limits-plants of the southern coastal zone. Finally the soil types are varied so that both plants of acid and of basic areas thrive. Nearly every food plant, then, known to birds in northern or central regions, either grows or can be grown on Mount Desert island.

Just as Lafayette National park differs from the western parks in surroundings and type of scenery, so it differs in origin. When the era of national park creation came, the federal government owned vast stretches of mountain and plain and valley in the West, and was able to select that which was most picturesque and merely designate it as public playgrounds. But all public lands in the East had long since passed into private hands, and for several decades there were no eastern parks. The unique beauty of Mount Desert Island led persons famillar with it to feel that it would be the ideal eastern park. An association of private individuals was formed and tract after tract of the rugged hills of the Island were purchased. These were tendered to the national government in 1916, and in 1919 congress passed an act accepting the land and creating the park. It is contemplated that other tracts will be added from time to time until eventually a large part of the mountainous island will be a federal reservation.
