INFORMATION ABOUT AGRICULTURAL SUBJECTS FROM RELIABLE SOURCES

Why are some feeders able to finish their cattle more economically and more rapidly than other feeders who feed cattle of the same age? Why do some fat cattle top the market while others sell a dollar, maybe three dollars below the top? Why are a great many consumers of meat willing to pay 35 cents a pound for prime beef steak while they would reject inferior steak at half that price?

Because animals of better breeding are superiors in the feed lot, at the market and on the butchers block. Why are well bred animals superior? Because they have been bred for performance and have been selected accordingly for many generations. Have not scrubs been bred for performance? Decidedly not. The breeders of scrubs have had no future in mind. They have bred to no definite things. Naturally then there are many very undesirable qualities in every scrub. A scrub bull will sire no two calves alike. He tears down a herd while the purebred bull builds up a herd. The scrub bull is the most expensive bull in Nebraska.

This year nearly all plum and cherry trees are loaded with fruit. Many of them are also covered with plant lice, little greenish or blackish soft bodied sucking insects that work mostly on the under side of the leaves. These lice are ordinarily not very destructive, but this year they are exceptionally numerous and no doubt are damaging these fruit crops to some extent.

Poisons are useless in controlling these insects since they do not eat the leaf surface but merely suck the sap. The Nebraska Agricultural College says the most satisfactory material to use is Nicotine Sulfate, a tobacco preparation which kills by contact. The material is a thick blackish liquid applied at the rate of one teaspoonful to a gallon of water in which has been dissolved a piece of soap the size of a pigeon egg. The soap is added in increasing the spreading power and penetration of the nicotine.

In applying this material it is important to reach the under side of the leaves since the insects are most numerous here. It is absolutely necessary that the material come in contact with the insect.

The Nebraska Crop Growers Association reports that more than 100 applications for crop inspection and seed certification are now on file. The rules for seed certification for 1922 have been made more strict in order insure that the grain which qualifies is true to name, pure, free from disease and of good quality. Thirty-five counties are represented among the applications with Kanred wheat, Nebraska No 6 and 60 wheat, Nebraska 21 oats and Rosen rye predominating among the grains to be certified. Field inspections in which the fields are examined for purity, mixtures, smut, noxious weeds and other requirements start this week. All those whose fields pass will be given a handsome certificate of inspection, furnished with tags of the Association which give the information required by the state seed law and listed in the certified seed list of the Association. In the past few weeks much grain, particularly Kanred wheat sold for seed, has not been true to its name. It is to furnish good seed true to name that the seed certification work is carried on. Any one wanting pure seed of the high yielding strains and varieties should write the Nebraska Crop Growers Association, Agricultural College, Lincoln, Nebraska for the certified seed list which will be available about July 20th.

There are being brought to our notice man instances in which little chicks are dying of insufficient amounts of water. In one case the chicks were dying in considerable numbers with no apparent cause. They were receiving an admirable ration, they had plenty of ventilation, good quarters and came from healthy stock. Upon post mortem it was found that their gizzards were filled with dry food and were in a compact condition. The blood was so thick it would not run freely from a chick was killed. Questioning brought out the fact that the chicks only had water twice each day. The quantity of water was insufficient in view of the fact that there was only a quart twice a day for one hundred seventy chicks that would average half a pound. Little chicks need water, especially in hot weather, more than any one thing. They cannot drink enough at one time to last them more than one hour. If they are allowed to get the water they need, they will drink small quantities often. A good method to furnish water to chicks is a barrel under a shade tree that continually drips into a clean pan. It will not be necessary to refill this very often and it furnishes a constant supply of fresh water as is needed by the chicks.

Shade is one of the essentials to successful poultry raising. This is especially true during that period when many little chicks are somewhat devoid of feathers. A young orchard or a wild plum grove are ideal places for raising chicks. Some successful poultry producers grow their chicks at the edge of a corn field. The corn furnishes shade and an abundance of worm and bugs which are conducive to growth.

SCOUTMASTERS GO ON OVERNIGHT CAMP AND CUT UP CAPERS

Following is printed just as it was handed to us.

Fourteen scoutmasters and assistants went to the new scout camp seven miles northwest of town and camped last Wednesday night. Supper was cooked and dishes washed after which a thrilling game of indoor baseball was staged. George Young received a severe bump on the ankle from a frantic runner attempting to make first base, while A. Elliott tried to make a saddle horse out of Lynton Mills gifting him a sissors hold on the head. Darkness came along and stopped the fun so the swimming hole was the next objective.

Ivan Walters tried to make a high dive into three feet of water, being fooled into thinking it was neck deep by some of the men. After about thirty minutes of this sport the bunch proceeded back to the camp fire which was blazing high from the efforts of those who did not swim.

Gathering around the fire on chairs made by nature's hands, the discussion of some problems very vital to the scout work was taken up. At eleven o'clock some of the scouts retired while some remained about the fire informally talking over the work of the scoutmaster.

At midnight some of those who retired early got up from their beds of earth to rest for a while. It sounded funny to hear some of them getting out of their beds to rest. One or two sound sleepers evidently rested some but some of our playful scout leader insisted in keeping most of the bunch awake.

At four-thirty everyone was up except Dr. Snavely who was sleeping peacefully under his tent which had been let down on him. A six o'clock breakfast was over and the first car started for town.

Mrs. G. F. Weinigand arrived today from Los Angeles and will stop over for a few hours to visit with relatives. Brunswick phonographs, Holley Music House.

Miss Helen Schwaiger returned Friday from Omaha where she visited for several days on her way home from the Campfire Camp at Crete.
