The old strawberry bed, if it is to produce well next spring, needs renewing soon after it has ceased bearing. The one year old crowns yield more and better berries than the older crowns. The object therefore in renewing is to get an abundance of new plants this year according to the University of Nebraska Agricultural

First the leaves are mowed and with the mulching material raked off and burned. This is of great benifit in destroying diseases and insects which are present on the leaves. Then it is necessary to thin the plants and give the remaining plants good growing conditions to encourage the production of runners. The thinning may be accomplished with a hoe, a spade or a plow. If a hoe is used, a well established plant is left every 9 to 12 inches and the others cut away. Plants are left closer than they were originally set since they will not make such good runner growth the second year as they did the first. The ground about the plant should then be hoed to enable the runners to root readily.

Another method of thinning is to leave a strip of plants from 4 to 6 inches wide at the edge of the old matted row and spade or plow under all the other plants. If plowing is resorted to it is necessary to level the ridges and pulverize the soil by harrowing crosswise.
