Isaiah said—"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee; because he trusteth in thee."
—Isaiah 26:3.

Abraham Lincoln said—"Let every American, every well-wisher to his posterity, swear by the blood of the Revolution, never to violate in the least particular the laws of the country and never to tolerate their violation by others."

Mrs. Thos. Doolittle has conceived the idea of naming some of the main roads and is particularly interested in the road leading to her farm home. She is urging the name University Drive for the road extending from the city limits of North Platte to the state farm and where it divides she would call it East University drive and West University drive as far as these roads extend in a straight line. The idea of naming the road is a good one. The road is commonly called "The State Farm Road" now and if the other name meets with more general approval, let's name it and put up signs to that effect.

Dr. and Mrs. Morrill and daughter Alma returned the last of the week from an extended trip through the lake country of Minnesota. They made the trip by auto, Miss Alma doing the driving while Doc watched the country and studied the road. He says he would just as soon have a well gravelled road from North Platte city limits to the Experimental station as one paved with any kind of material. He thinks it is about one-tenth as expensive and requires very little up-keep to put it in good condition for many years. He reports fishing in Minnesota good this year and tells some good stories about the fish he caught.

The first wedding ceremony at the court house this week was performed yesterday by Judge Woodhurst when he united Shirley E. Cary, 22, a clerk of Lemoine and Miss Irene L. Skinner, 18 of Sarben. Miss Blankenburg was so gracious to them while they were going through the ordeal of making out the records that the groom went out after the ceremony and bought her a box of chocolates in appreciation.

Considerable interest was manifested in the case of Chas. Frederic who was charged with assault and battery by Nick Ekonomos. The trial was set for Wednesday afternoon and quite a crowd assembled to hear the evidence. A jury brought in a verdict of guilty and Judge Woodhurst sentenced him to 30 days in jail. He at once appealed the case and it was taken to the fall term of the district court. Frederic was released on $1,000.00 bonds which he furnished.

Announcement was made yesterday from the office of County Agent Kellogg that a committee of North Platte ladies had chosen Eleanor Leavitt and Lyle Morris, both of the Bignell canning club, as the canning team to represent Lincoln county at the state fair this year. These young people have worked hard in their club work and it is expected they will make a good showing in the canning contest. A poultry demonstration team from the boys and girls clubs of the county will be selected some time next week and the names announced.

SEASON TICKETS FOR CHAUTAUQUA ARE SELLING THIS WEEK

Canvassers are calling on the business and professional men of the city and those of the citizens who signed the guarantee for this year's session and asking them to purchase tickets for the Chautauqua which opens here next week. The committee is working toward making the full guarantee and believe they will be successful. One number alone, the Hagg Jubilee Singers, is worth the price of a season ticket. They give a full program in the afternoon of the first day and again in the evening. On the last evening Harold Bell Wright's "Shepherd of the Hills" will be given by a company of artists who have been chosen especially for this play.

NEW AMERICAN LEGION ORCHESTRA HAS NOW BEEN ORGANIZED

A six-piece musical organization has been organized here under the name of the American Legion orchestra. It has taken over the Lloyd Opera House and will operate it under the name of "Danceland" while Manager Peterson is away. The first of a series of Saturday night dances will be given tomorrow night. The boys say they will conduct an enjoyable dance and will furnish good music. The orchestra is composed of Jandebour, trombone; Cushman, banjo; Stamp, saxophone; Ritter, trumpet; Brodbeck, drums and Westefeld, piano.

What's One to Do?

"Do I think I'd care to go to the pictures? Sure, Mr. Featherhead! I do on them. But if I couldn't see you're a perfect gentleman I should thank you kindly and plead another engagement, since I've only known you these two days that I've been staying at the 'Belvedere'."

"Taking my holidays early? Well—yes, I had to. You see, Mr. Featherhead, I only graduated last winter—very strictly brought up, I was, and it was a dreadful day when my father's death made it necessary for me to go into the business world. I'm all alone in the world except for Sister Nancy, and she's, well, she's peculiar, Mr. Featherhead, and we'll let it go at that."

"You see, there are girls who can make their way in business life, but I soon found I wasn't one of them. If you've got passable good looks and some style, you've either got to debauch yourself or get out. I studied stenography, and I got a position with Brummell & Co., the export firm—do you know them? No? I shouldn't think you would, Mr. Featherhead, because I can see you're not their style."

"Would you believe me, I hadn't been there three days before young Mr. Brummell asked me why I looked so sour. So I told him a respectable girl had to look sour in business, or first thing she knew some man would be presuming. Then he said he didn't mind my looking sour if I knew how to spell, and apart from that would I try taking his notes in longhand, because I could do it faster."

"I swallowed that, and next day he asked me what I meant by presuming, and I said that innocent business girls were always in danger of being asked out to tea by men, and then they had to give up their jobs or lose their self-respect. Mr. Brummell said he was glad to know, and wouldn't it be better to make print letters, so I could read them afterward. And that very afternoon, when he'd been reading through a batch of letters I'd typed for him, he suddenly turned round and asked me would I come out to tea with him?"

"I'm not the kind to take a dare, so I told him I was through and came away. After that I had an awful time, but by and by I got a job with an envelope concern—Smith & Co. You wouldn't know them, I can see that."

"Would you believe me, after I'd been working there two weeks I found a bunch of flowers on my desk one morning from young Mr. Smith, whom I worked for. They were ragweeds. I looked up ragweeds in the Language of Flowers, but they weren't given, so I couldn't find out just how much young Mr. Smith meant by them. But I was on guard then, I tell you, and I took them to him, explaining that a girl couldn't take gifts from men until she was engaged to him."

"Kind of nice man, young Mr. Smith was in many ways, but fast as they make them. When I asked him if it meant he wanted to be engaged to me he got all heated up, and finally confessed that the firm was going bankrupt, and he couldn't afford to marry for twenty years or so, and every one was leaving, but he was giving me the tip privately, and I could take two weeks' salary because I was smarter than the rest of the girls."

"Well, after that you bet I discouraged familiarity from my next boss. His name was Peters—know him? You wouldn't, Mr. Featherhead. He was running an office downtown—I won't give the address away, and I was the only girl there. There was only old Mr. Peters in the room with me, and you bet I kept my eye on him like a cat watching a mouse."

"I knew there were rocks ahead from the way he'd look at me when he thought I didn't see him, and sure enough there were."

"He used to stand over me when I was typing, with a look in his eye that any girl would understand the meaning of. The morning came when he suddenly snatched the sheet that I'd just typed out of my hand and tore it up. I knew then that his passion for me had grown uncontrollable, and I let out a scream that brought half the employees of the building into the room."

"They found me struggling with the monster—I tell you I marked his face for him—and there was some talk of getting a policeman, but the middle of it all I fainted in the arms of young Mr. Bottomley, of Enbright's—do you know them?—and when I came to I was lying on the sofa with the doors wide open, and every soul on that floor had gone but me! That's what people do for innocence in distress, Mr. Featherhead."

"So, you see, that's why I'm taking my holidays early, and, as for the pictures—what's that? He's remembered another engagement? What an extraordinary young man! I never saw any one walk so quickly!"

The Gauche Girl, Senator Hiram Johnson said in an address in Washington:

"State papers of international import should be very delicately worded. Every effort should be made not to give offense. Yet some of our diplomats seem to me to be as gauche in these matters as the little girl who said to the doctor:

"Here's the remains of the medicine you gave grandpop, doctor. He's dead, and mamma thought you might want to use it on somebody else."
