

CULLING TO INCREASE EGG PRODUCTION SHOWN BY EXHIBIT

A sure means of increasing egg production by proper culling is given in an exhibit entitled "Make your poultry pay" shown by the United States Department of Agriculture at the International Livestock Exposition, Chicago, December 2 to 9.

Two pens of live chickens are shown. One lot of twelve hens was not culled, and ate in one year 900 pounds of feed, costing $20.70. The twelve hens laid 100 dozen eggs during the year. Contrasted with this lot is one of eight hens which were culled, and which laid the same number of eggs but ate only 600 pounds of feed, at a cost of $13.50. The lot of twelve hens that was not culled ate fifty per cent more feed than the lot that was culled and produced no more eggs. The extra cost of feed, however, is but one of the larger costs, housing room, and extra capital invested.

To enable the poultryman to cull his hens properly the exhibit gives the points to be looked for when determining a poor layer or a good layer. These points are quickly learned and are means of increasing profits from poultry.

CHARLIE ROBERTSON IN A HERO ROLE

When he pitched a no-hit, no-run game without a man reaching first, this pet of the White Sox didn't realize he would get writer's cramp from autographing baseballs for pretty girl baseball fans, but that is just what happened. The girls kept writing his name on the balls.

In some parts of India, I discovered, clothes—or the lack of them—cause little concern; children up to six or eight years old wear absolutely nothing. All the barbering is done in the open street.

For the most part, houses are simply built of clay, with brush thrown over the top. The better classes of natives pile into tenement houses as people do in the congested districts of New York City, and their ambition seems to be to crowd as many persons into a room as possible, and to have as many children as nature will permit.—World Traveler.

"What paper?"

EXHIBITS AT CHICAGO LIVE STOCK SHOW ARE VERY CONVINCING

In an exhibit entitled "Pork production," shown by the United States Department of Agriculture at the International Live Stock Exposition, Chicago, December 2 to 9, the department gives the essential points for raising swine economically.

Good breeding stock, proper mating, and careful feeding of the brood sows are all important, but a point in hog raising that should receive more attention, because it is often neglected, is the necessity of keeping the young pigs growing continuously from the moment of birth to maturity.

Even before the pigs are weaned they should have access to corn in self-feeders as a supplement to the sow's milk. As soon as they are weaned the pigs should be kept on full feed, either by self feeder or by hand. Approved types of self-feeders, rayracks, troughs, and watering fountains are shown in the exhibit. Proper feeds and exercise furnished to vigorous pigs of proper type result in hogs of market weight at about eight months of age.

"The profitable pig is the one that never stops growing from farrowing to market" is a good slogan for every hog raiser.
