Geo. B. Kinney moved to Missouri the first of the week.

John Moore has been assisting in this office for two or three days.

Joe Haith and Jeff Drumm started west the first of the week with a load of onions.

The Granger says it is incorrect that the Nemaha county bar is a unit for Judge Stull for district judge, but cannot mention a member of the bar that is not in favor of his election.

The Methodist ladies will give a dime sociable at the residence of I. N. Cooper Friday night of next week. Oysters will be served. Proceeds to pay incidental expenses. Everybody is invited.

For an unknown period the scholars in the Nemaha school have been compelled to carry water some distance, as the school grounds were not provided with a well. The school board has decided that this is not doing justice to the scholars, and are having a well sunk. Dick Dowler is doing the work.

ADVERTISED LETTERS.

The following is a list of letters remaining in the Nemaha postoffice unclaimed Nov. 1, 1895:

Geo. Galaway, Esq.;
Mrs. Emma Gillespie;
Mrs. E. D. Snow;
Mrs. Kate Kaufman;
Mrs. Sappia Shandy;
Mr. William R. Stinson.

There is no reason why any republican should vote for any opposition candidate this year. The candidates on the republican ticket are at least equal in every respect to those on the opposite ticket, and in many cases their superior. One republican recently said he did not propose to vote to put any man in an office and thus assist in giving him a place and assisting in paying him a good salary when he was doing all in his power to destroy the party to which he belonged. This election has a decided influence on next year's campaign, when a national and state ticket is to be elected. Every vote counts. See that it is cast right.

Say, why don't you try De Witt's Little Early Risers? These little pills cure headache, indigestion and constipation. They're small, but do the work Taylor, the druggist.

The Mania for Titles.

It is suggested by Mr. Henry Labouchere, the London newspaper man, that if American heiresses find titles indispensable the United States government might be doing wisely to create a home supply of titles to fill the demand. Says Mr. Labouchere:

"The mania for titles inherent in the Anglo-Saxon it is vain to contend against. But the matter is somewhat serious to the United States. That country must be a great loser through the accumulations of its wealth crossing the Atlantic. If this continues the United States will do well to manufacture the coveted article at home, for it is a wooden nutmeg that is easily bought. The existence of titles, it is true, is not in accordance with the simplicity of republican institutions, but in view of the heavy drain this might be overlooked, and the parents of any girl might be allowed to buy her a title, say for one million dollars."

There does not seem to be any real reason, however, why the government need take action in this matter. To carry out Mr. Labouchere's plan to its plainly logical conclusion it would merely be necessary for every American subject to select whatever title suited his fancy and adopt it. Let the plan be thorough. It would cost nothing for any man to style himself a "duke" or "viscount," and having called himself such it would take all the logic of Europe to prove that he was not quite as good a duke as any of the dukes of effete Europe. Better still, pass an act of congress creating every American boy from the time of his birth an earl and every girl a duchess. With something over sixty-five million dukes and duchesses in the country who would care to go abroad for tinsel honors?

Fun for the Guests.

Nothing is half so funny as a young bridal couple trying to look old and not giving away the fact that they are a bride and groom. Usually their efforts only make it more noticeable. Such was the case with a young couple the other evening at dinner. They arrived in the night and avoided attracting attention from the guests, but the next day a gentleman asked the clerk to have a bunch of white roses placed upon the table at which this couple sat. The clerk waited until they had gone into the dining-room and then sent the beautiful bouquet in. The waiter, with all the pomp of his profession, placed the roses in the middle of the table. The bride blushed and the groom looked as if he were making a desperate effort to quote Scripture backward. Finally, so embarrassing did the situation become, that the groom, in a wild effort to remove the cause, grabbed the bouquet and set it down on the floor. Naturally, the guests enjoyed the scene, and to see a young bridal couple sitting at a table with a large bouquet of white roses sitting on the floor beside them only made their efforts not to give themselves away the more ridiculous. Newly wedded people should be licensed to carry firearms and be privileged to use them on such occasions.

For the first time since the war the state bonds of Louisiana sold at par a few days ago. This is an advance in credit most encouraging to that state, which has paid a heavy penalty for its repudiation policy. Its credit is not yet fully reestablished, for its bonds which bring four per cent. ought to bring a premium. Many of the discredited obligations of Louisiana have been disposed of by compromise or otherwise, and the interest on the present debt has been promptly paid for twelve years, so that the improvement in the state's credit is deserved.

Hsu Nai Kwang, the Chinese consul general in New York, who has aroused the antagonism of his fellow-countrymen there, is reported to be a tremendous aristocrat. He is of lofty lineage and great wealth. He is fully aware of his vast importance in the universe and is haughty and unapproachable. His wife is a charming little woman who has become a mother since she resided in that city.

ENGLAND is laughing at the case of a tory squire, a widower over seventy years old, who is said to have settled all his property on his son, with the exception of a slight annuity, in order to evade the death duties. The old gentleman then fell in love and was accepted, but the unfilial son declined to provide funds to set him up in matrimony and the match is off.

A WOMAN station agent on a California railroad successfully stood off two robbers with a revolver the other day. If all male officials were as well-placed, there would be fewer station and train robberies. It takes the "new" woman to get the "drop" on male-factors.

Why Men Will Steal.

In a talk on "Stealing in High Places—Cause and Cure," on a recent Sunday evening Rev. Dr. F. A. Noble, of the Union Park Congregational church, Chicago, uttered some plain and simple, yet forceful truths which should be carefully considered by every young man holding a position of trust in this country to-day. Dr. Noble said:

"There are facts sufficient before us to make us believe that there are large numbers of people who are willing to convert to their own use much of that which does not belong to them. This is hurtful to everybody living in such an atmosphere of distrust—thinking that somebody is trying to cheat you in every transaction. There are four causes constantly operating upon men to make them betray confidence, the first of which is a low moral sense—a lack of conscience. It is a fact that there can be cultivation in literature, art, the sciences, in one of low moral organization. The second is the mad desire to make money. We are living in an age of impatience. Everything is on the rush. Millionaires spring up in a week—impetuous lords come over here and marry our girls. The man in a bank, seeing the sudden fortune of another, yields to temptation and takes his employer's funds for investment. There is usually but one result—ruin. Then there is the determination of young men on moderate salaries to live beyond their means, which when the end is reached leaves the ambitious fellow deeply in debt and usually disgraced. The moral delinquencies of our young men can be expressed in four words—cards, horses, wine and women. The fourth cause for crimes of this stamp is the fact that men do not count the cost, the ruin and disgrace, not only for themselves, but their dear ones as well. A cure for all this can be found in a reversal of the processes that cause them. If you have a low moral sense, realize it and guard it. Develop the conscience. Be more patient in the matter of accumulating riches. Live within your means and do not spend money to-day with the idea that you can get even to-morrow. Make the sacrifice to-day. Bear in mind what a misstep will cost you and your friends. What is wanted is more moral courage. Establish a principle and be able to stand by it. When we are afraid of God we cease to be afraid of men."

A Pitiable Creature.

If there is a man on earth to be pitied it is he who is afraid of his wife. There is something very sad and at the same time a trifle ludicrous about such a case. To see man, who has always styled himself the master, meekly following the advice and obeying the dictum of one of the so-called "weaker sex" must do the hearts of some "new women" an infinite deal of good. I doubt, says a writer in the Philadelphia Times, if a woman ever respects a man whom she can twist about her little finger or one of those men who are subservient to her every beck and call, and who acts afraid of her. Neither, on the other hand, do most women like the tyrannical description of spouses. A happy medium is the approved style, but it's very hard to find one of the sort. Men nowadays are either too meek and mild, or else too tyrannical to suit an up-to-date woman.

THE New York legislature at its last session enacted a law which has just gone into effect, the object of which is to prevent telephone operators from injudicious talking. The act makes it a misdemeanor for any telegraph or telephone operator to divulge the contents of any message received or transmitted by him or her in the regular course of business, or for any person to obtain or seek to obtain such information. This statute is an amendment to a law enacted some years ago, which applied only to telegraph messages, the telephone being then an undiscovered boon in the custody of the future.

A CHICAGO man is bringing suit against the Order of Foresters for injuries received by being tossed in a blanket. His leg was broken and he thinks it will take ten thousand dollars to mend it comfortably. While the injury resulted in a purely accidental manner it was nevertheless brought about by the reprehensible "hoss play" so frequently indulged in by asinine members of "secret" societies. Such "work" should be left to the hazing societies of the colleges.

SO MANY sheriffs in the west and south have lately added bloodhounds to their force of criminal trackers that the price of the animals is increasing, and the raising of them is becoming quite a business, notably, perhaps, in Kentucky. One hundred dollars is said to be an average price for a good bloodhound pup now.

HUMPHREYS'

That the diseases of domestic animals, HORSES, CATTLE, SHEEP, DOGS, HOGS, and POULTRY, are cured by Humphreys' Veterinary Specifics, is as true as that people ride on railroads, send messages by telegraph, or sew with sewing machines. It is as irrational to bottle, ball and bleed animals in order to cure them, as it is to take passage in a sloop from New York to Albany. Used in the best stables and recommended by the U. S. Army Cavalry Officers.
