The Methodist ladies' aid society will give a supper at the poor farm the night before Thanksgiving for the purpose of raising money to pay off the remainder of the church extension loan. At the time the church was built a loan of $250 at 6 per cent interest was secured from the church extension fund. This was to be paid at the rate of $50 a year and interest. In June, 1891, when the church was dedicated, the ladies' aid society assumed the payment of this obligation. The last payment is due January 1st, 1896. The ladies have to raise $20 or $25 more to meet this payment and want to make it at this supper. This will put the church entirely out of debt.

Eugene V. Lockwood died at his home in Genoa Cayuga Co., New York, Nov. 4, in the sixty-second year of his age, after a long and severe illness which finally terminated in apoplexy. He was one of the old settlers, coming to Nebraska in 1856. He bought a farm on the Nemaha bottoms adjoining his father's land, and including a portion that is now known as Lockwood Bend, owned at present by Seymour Howe. His health was always poor in Nebraska. It improved after his return to New York, and continued fairly good, until his last sickness. Only two now survive out of a family of eight—the youngest daughter, Mrs. Helen M. Snyder, of Venice, New York, and Mrs. Alice A. Minick, now of Beatrice. The deceased leaves a devoted wife to mourn his loss, beside his two sisters, and a large circle of relatives.

Say, why don't you try De Witt's Little Early Risers? These little pills cure headache, indigestion and constipation. They're small, but do the work Taylor the druggist

The West Point Republican arrived at the mature age of twenty-five years Nov. 15th, and celebrated that event by issuing a twelve page illustrated edition that does credit to the publisher and to the town. In the write-up of the newspapers of the state the Republican says:

"But eight papers in the entire state were started before 1870 which are alive today. They are as follows, according to age: The Nemaha Advertiser takes the lead in age in Nebraska, having been founded in 1856; next comes the Tecumseh Chief in 1865; Falls City Journal started in 1866; Lincoln Journal and Nebraska City Staats Zeitung, established 1867; Fremont Tribune and Pawnee Republican, 1868; Grand Island Independent, 1869. The Nebraska papers which were established in 1870 are: West Point Republican, Beatrice Express, Blair Republican, Columbus Journal, Fairbury Gazette, Seward Reporter. These few papers have weathered the storms of nearly a generation, and are pioneers of Nebraska journalism. The state owes a debt of gratitude to them which can never be repaid. The value of their work is incalculable."

Acts at once, never fails. One Minute Cough Cure. A remedy for asthma, and that feverish condition which accompanies a severe cold. The only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. Taylor, the druggist.
