TROUBLE AHEAD.

faccination to Be Forced on Men in St Louis Factories and Business Houses. ST. LOUIS, Nov. 2.-There is trouble ahead for Dr. Max Starkloff and the city board of health. It will grow out of the board's alleged determination to raise the city's vaccination percentage by extending the compulsory system to many of the large factories and business houses, where a great many men are employed, besides continuing it in the public schools. It has been announced, unofficially, that the board will press vaccination upon men regardless of their wishes, under the pretense that it is justified by the city ordinances. If such an attempt is made it will meet with determined resistance, and the matter will be carried into the courts and fought to a finish.

VASSAR GIRLS' FOOD.

Immense Quantities of Provisions De voured at the College.

A New York Mail and Express reporter has discovered a down-town house that rejoices in the honor of supplying the sweet Vassar girls with what they eat. It is quite a serious affair, the educated appetites of these young ladies. They have increased steadily the past five years, and the merchant who furnishes "a few figures" says that if the increase goes on it will be necessary to include the daily food purchases of the college in the market reports to see what effect they may have on prices. This merchant would not give his own personal figures, but he exhibited an annual statement of the college that has just been issued.

What will Boston culture and other things esthetic say to an army of young women who will so far forget all conventionalism as to eat 125,000 buckwheat cakes in one year? Nothing surreptitious about this either. All done openly and above the table board. Looking along the list it will be found that the young ladies consumed 250 barrels of flour, 10,000 oranges and lemons, 14,000 bananas, 105,000 quarts of milk, 1,200 bushels of potatoes, 97,000 pounds of fresh meats, 10,000 pounds of smoked meats, 6,000 pounds of chickens, 5,000 pounds of turkeys, 5,000 pounds of fish, 40,600 clams, 165,000 gallons of oysters, 18,000 pounds of butter, and last, but not least, by any means, in a Vassar girl's composition, 32,000 pounds of sugar.

In the above no allowance is made, it will be noticed, for the "stolen fruits," such as forbidden luncheons and candy smacks after retiring, nor is any attention paid to the tea, coffee, vegetables and sweetmeats. Surely these young ladies have educated appetites.

The Jeweled Serpent's Headdress.

In Italy the peasantry talk of the 'jeweled serpent" and the wonderful crown or chaplet which he wears. This serpent, which the naturalists claim is as mythical as the legendary hoop snake, is held in great reverence by the ignorant Italians, and many curious stories are told about his crown. The crown is believed to be separate from the snake's head, and to be composed of natural jewels of great occult power. Occasionally a jeweled serpent lays his crown aside while foraging, and if it is found and picked up by some person at this time it will work weal or woe, according to the time of day. Insanity, the Italians claim, is caused by people discovering and picking up serpent crowns in the early morning, before the dew is off the grass!-St. Louis Republic.
