Last week's Iowa Homestead ought to be in the hands of every farmer in this county. Its contents are rich in practical timely interest, and it is accompanied by an index for the year, which contains upwards of 3,000 titles, indicating the large amount of varied and valuable farm counsel which it furnishes for a single dollar. The Special Farmers' Institute edition for January also accompanies the issue, and is of unusual interest. Particularly noteworthy are the views given by many farmers in regard to the general farming situation, as expressed in the discussion of the question whether young men of limited means should buy farms under present conditions. The government seed distribution is also discussed, and does not seem to have a friend in the world. No farmer in this county should be without the Homestead and its Special Institute editions for the current year. Now is the time to subscribe. Subscription price, $1. Sample copies free.
