To those who are in favor of a sinking fund being created to build a court house we would ask, will it be cheaper to pile up a large sum of money in the county treasury for banks to fight over and loan to us at 10 per cent interest than to pay 5 per cent interest on bonds running ten years, with the option of paying in five years?

Creating a sinking fund means piling up a large sum of money for the banks to quarrel over, placing a temptation for some one to steal, and no protection to the records for two or three years, and then perhaps find our money tied up in some defunct bank. Voting bonds means giving the county's note for a sum of money which will be forthwith expended in building a court house and the protection of our records.
