HENDERSON FOR SPEAKER.

The Iowa Man Sure to Succeed Thomas B. Reed—Sketch of His Military and Political Career.

Chicago, June 5.—The Record-to-day says: Congressman David B. Henderson, of Iowa, received enough pledges by telegraph and mail to give him 103 votes in the republican caucus when it meets in Washington. As 93 votes constitute a majority of the republican representation in the house, Col. Henderson has nine to the good and more states to hear from. Word came to Chicago yesterday that James S. Sherman and Seneca E. Payne, New York's rival aspirants for the speakership, will withdraw from the contest in a few days, thus making Col. Henderson's election unanimous.

Career of Col. Henderson.

David B. Henderson, of Iowa, has become a national figure of considerable proportion. He finally is elected to the office, "which has no peer and no superior," the country will have reason to hear much of his personality and abilities. Mr. Henderson never can be president. He was born at Old Deer, in Scotland, in 1840, but was brought by his parents to this country when six years old. They settled in Illinois and removed three years later to Iowa. Young Henderson was reared on a farm, and on the breaking out of the war in 1861 enlisted as a private in company C, Twelfth Iowa infantry. He was elected and commissioned first lieutenant of that company, serving with it until he was discharged, owing to the loss of a leg at Corinth. He had taken part in the battles of Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, Shiloh and Corinth, and had also been slightly wounded at one of the earlier fights. Three months after he was mustered out he was appointed commissioner of the board of enrollment of the Third district of Iowa, in which capacity he served until June, 1864, when he re-entered the army as colonel of the Forty-Sixth Iowa infantry. He served until the close of the war. In November, 1865, he was made an internal revenue collector for the Third district of Iowa, and, while holding this office, completed his law studies, so that in 1869 he became a member of the firm of Shiras, Van Duzee & Henderson. At this time he was made assistant United States district attorney for the Northern district of Iowa, but resigned in 1871. He was elected to congress in the fall of 1882, and has been re-elected every two years since. Col. Henderson, though not yet 60 years old, appears older on account of the physical infirmities resulting from his wounds in battle. It has happened that for several months at a time he has hardly been able to attend to his congressional duties, on account of the intense suffering caused by the growth of something in the nature of an abscess near the line of amputation. He has been obliged to submit to repeated surgical operations to obtain relief.

THE PLAN OF ARBITRATION.

A Belief in Washington That the American Scheme Will Be Adopted by the Peace Congress.

Washington, June 5.—According to official dispatches received at the state department from the American delegation at The Hague, there is every reason to believe that the American plan of arbitration, with perhaps some modifications, will be adopted by the peace conference. This probably will be the only result of the conference. The authorities understand that hope of stopping further armament by means of action at The Hague has been abandoned and that the delegates have also given up their belief that the conference will agree to propositions for ameliorating the hardships of war. Even the amendment of the treaty of Paris of 1856 regarding the protection of private property at sea is believed to stand little chance of adoption. It is, therefore, likely that the one result of the conference will be a treaty under which the several participating nations will be able, if they desire to do so, to submit their disputes to an arbitration tribunal, to be formed as contemplated by the American plan.

WAS A NOTABLE OCCASION.

Diplomatic Relations Resumed With Spain, After a War That Has Changed the Map of the World.

Washington, June 5.—Diplomatic relations with Spain, broken off April 21, 1898, were formally resumed at 11 o'clock Saturday when President McKinley greeted Duc d'Arcos, the newly-accredited minister to the United States, in the blue parlor of the white house. Simultaneously in Madrid, if the programme arranged was carried out, Bellamy Storer, the new United States minister to Spain, was being presented to Christina, the queen regent during the legal minority of his Catholic majesty Alphonso XIII. It was a notable occasion in the world's history—the resumption of friendly relations between two nations which had been at war and in the brief struggle had changed the map of the world.

SONG OF THE SHIRT WAIST.

It Arises When the Atry, Fairy Favorite of the Ladies Makes Its Appearance.

Hark! the pipes of Pan are pleading—like a sweetheart interceding—in behalf of lazy fellows nowadays—for the proud and painted tulip—and the meek and minded julep—are a bloom again along life's arid ways!

Yes, it works a chap's unloading—when he knows that nature's wooing—from the uplands and the lowlands and the mares—When the noontide glows in splendor—when the nights are soft and tender—and the captivating shirt waist reappears!

When the liver-pad is writing—and the lily-pad is tilting—on the breeze bed-dimpled bosom of the pool—When the ripe red rose comes pleasing—and the ripe red nose stops sneezing—and the little boys play hookey from the school.

It is lawful to be lazy—when each dear, old-fashioned daisy—breathes a message from the fragrant yester years—When the fields are sweet with clover—and the mill (my heart) moreover—when the airy, fairy shirt waist reappears!

When the violet blossoms happy—on the coatlet of the cappie—When we hustle out the old mosquito bar—When the tipsy holds wassail—in his honeysuckle castle—when the troubadour is tuning his catarrh.

When that tired, transcendent feeling—into every heart comes stealing—sweetly pensive, like a sunny maiden's tears—When the bird choirs lift their voices—when, in short, all earth rejoices—and the immortal shirt waist reappears!—N. O. Times-Democrat.

WHEN A MONKEY IS A DOG.

How Buckland, the Naturalist, Got Some Good Pointers on Animals.

A good story of an amusing altercation which once took place between Mr. Frank Buckland and a bookish clerk is revived. The naturalist had been in France, and was returning via Southampton with an overcoat stuffed with specimens of all sorts, dead and alive. Among them was a monkey, which was domiciled in a large breast pocket.

As Buckland was taking his ticket, Joko thrust up his head and attracted the attention of the bookish clerk, who immediately—and very properly—said: "You must have a ticket for that dog, if it's going with you."

"Dog?" said Buckland, indignantly; "it's no dog, it's a monkey."

"It's a dog," replied the clerk. "It's a monkey," retorted Buckland, and proceeded to show the whole animal, but without convincing the clerk, who insisted on five shillings for the dog ticket to London. Naturally nettled at this, Buckland plucked his hand into another pocket and produced a tortoise, and, laying it on the sill of the ticket window, said: "Perhaps you'll call that a dog, too?"

The clerk inspected the tortoise. "No," said he, "we make no charge for them—they're insects!"—Windsor Magazine.

Those Absurd Names.

"What ridiculous names they have over there in the Philippines," said the man who had just walked up to the counter and been assured by the clerk that he could have the best room in the hotel. "There's Calumpit, for instance. That name would make a horse laugh. Who ever heard of anything so absurd as to give a town such a postmark as that?"

Then he took the pen that the clerk had been holding out toward him and wrote upon the register: "J. Crawford, Woonsocket, R. I."—Chicago Evening News.

I never before had such an easy time during labor, and I feel it was due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am now able to do my work and feel better than I have for years. I cannot thank you enough."—MRS. ED. EHLINGER, DEVINE, TEX.
