 A recent letter from Rev. Chas. H. Gilmore, who is now at Chester, Neb., informs us that he will move to Washita, Cherokee county, Iowa, about the first of January.  G. N. Titus was the victim of a runaway Thursday night. He had been in town and was going home when his horse ran away in the west part of town. In going over a culvert the cart was upset and Nat thrown out. One leg and one wrist were injured. He was taken home by some of the neighbors. Friday morning he was able to be up but has to use a crutch to get around.
 Miss Veva Clark received news on Wednesday of the death of a cousin, Mead Hunter, of Hartstown, Pa. The little fellow, who was nine years old, went out with his father to help do the chores, and tied one end of a cow's lariat rope to his arm. The cow ran and dragged the boy for about a quarter of a mile. The boy breathed only twice after his father reached him. Miss Veva visited the family when she was in the east about four years ago and thought a great deal of Mead.
 Mart Hill had a narrow escape from being badly burned Thursday night. He was opening a bottle of sulphuric acid or oil of vitriol. The cork stuck and he had to work at it to get it out. When it came out some of the acid was splashed in his face and on his vest. Mart got the bottle of sweet oil as quickly as possible and applied some to his face, thus neutralizing the acid. His face is burned some but if he had not acted so promptly in applying the oil his face would have been badly scarred. His vest was ruined.

 Cattle that are running in stalk fields are dying from the so called cornstalk disease. The State Experiment Station at Lincoln have been trying to find the cause of the disease and a remedy for it, but can find out very little about it. They advise giving a half pound of salts to a grown animal or yearling, the dose to be repeated every half hour until there is a free passage. If the brain is affected give heavy doses of chloral hydrate in repeated doses at intervals of half to three quarters of an hour as long as the symptoms may require. Give from an ounce and a half to two ounces at a dose, mixing chloral with a little linseed water or flour water, and give in about a pint to a quart of water as a drench. For description and discussion of this disease write for Bulletin No. 52 of the Nebraska Experiment Station, addressing the "Agricultural Experiment Station, The University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb."

Ed Knapp went before Justice Smiley Thursday forenoon and wanted to plead guilty to assault and battery on J. W. Webber, but Mr. Smiley refused to fine him without further knowledge. It appears that Knapp, who is a son-in-law of Mr. Webber, has had some trouble with the latter on account of his driving cattle through the yard at Knapp's farm, which he rents of Webber. Wednesday evening Knapp gave Webber orders not to drive the cattle through the yard again and to keep off the place. Webber said he would build a lane the next morning and see if he couldn't drive his cattle on his own farm. He was again warned to keep away but the next morning appeared with a spade and started to work on the fence. Knapp warned him off the place and then went to the barn. Mr. Webber followed him and began to abuse him and finally the two got into a fight and Webber was badly whipped. Knapp helped him to the road and told him to keep off the place hereafter.
