Tree Growers Pass Resolutions.

The Nebraska Horticultural society held an interesting session at Kearney last week. Ex-Gov. Furnas spoke on Nebraska as a fruit-growing state, stating that heretofore Nebraska took first prize at every exhibition, but of late its fruit growers had become careless and the tree and fruit insects had possession of the best orchards. J. Sterling Morton sent a letter of regret, but he wrote a strong letter, urging the planting of trees, especially the pine, which started a discussion that ended in favor of the pine tree. William L. Hall, of Washington, assistant superintendent of tree planting, United States department of agriculture, read a paper. He said the forestry department is making investigations covering 12 states. Its work in Nebraska will cover 10,000,000 acres of government land, consisting largely of sandhills and lands not now subject to cultivation, and it hopes when done to convince the government that it will be public policy to plant trees and build reservoirs, thus reclaiming a large scope of country. Mr. Hall insisted that the people of Nebraska must take hold in earnest to obtain further government help. Resolutions were adopted urging congress to aid irrigation and tree planting in the arid regions of Nebraska.

Adams is 60 years old; the widow was 35. She sat down in the train near the old farmer and he was smitten. When they arrived in Sioux City they stopped at the same hotel and in a little while the old man suggested they be married. The widow, who had given her name as Mrs. Cora Smith, was agreeable, but first, at her suggestion, the old man made deeds transferring all of his property to the woman. They were to be married next morning. Adams was at the meeting place agreed upon, but his intended failed to appear. Thereupon he employed a lawyer to protect his interests and bring suit to set aside the deeds. It is believed the woman disappeared with a man who met her at the hotel.

IMPURE BREATH.

Some of the Causes and Means of Preventing This Disagreeable Affection.

The sources of impurities of the breath may be found in three regions, namely: The lungs, the stomach and the upper air passages, including the mouth, the throat and the nose.

In the greatest number of cases impure breath is the result of conditions in the mouth, throat or nose, conditions which render a possible lodgment and growth of microscopic vegetable parasites. These parasites—the lodgment of which in many instances is so secure that the acts of chewing and swallowing do not materially disturb them—give rise, in the course of their growth and decay, to the unpleasant odors, says Youth's Companion.

Prevention and remedy, therefore, depend upon the successful search for these vegetable parasites and their removal from the harbors where they accumulate.

Decayed teeth offer ideal conditions for the growth of certain germs and fungi. At times no cavities occur, and yet an accumulation of fungoid material renders the breath offensive. In such cases brushing must be supplemented by the use of an antiseptic mouth wash.

Other states of the mouth and throat giving rise to odors, although less well known, are nevertheless common. The depressions known as "crypts," commonly found in enlarged tonsils, furnish harbors for vegetable parasites. Large accumulations may here take place, partly of food, partly of fungoid growth, giving rise to perhaps no other symptom than unpleasant breath.

Deep accumulations of furring on the tongue give rise to similar unpleasant symptoms. An observer of his own tongue, judging by its appearance, might suppose his stomach to be in an alarming condition. Removal of the thick furring by gentle scraping and the use of antiseptic mouth washes usually prove entirely remedial. Dr. Holmes was accustomed to prescribe a little silver hoe for the purpose of removing this accumulation.

Certain disorders of the nose give rise to some of the most pervasive and unpleasant odors of the breath. Even these, however, are amenable to remedies, although the home use of antiseptic sprays and douches must sometimes be supplemented by treatment at the hands of a physician.

The conditions of the lungs and stomach giving rise to foulness of the breath likewise require more aid than can usually be given by home treatment, although these states are commonly to be prevented by the observance of hygienic rules.

Very rarely do cases of impure breath arise from causes so obscure as to be incapable of relief or improvement.

Rejuvenating Effects of Exercise.

Women as a rule regard time spent in open air exercise as wasted. If they would heed the monitions of their medical advisers they would soon discard such an idea as fallacious. The girls of the present day are doing much to overthrow the old theories and to bring about a healthier belief in fresh air and exercise. American girls have ever been admired for beauty and charm, but hitherto our young women as a whole have lacked staying power. They have had vivacity, esprit and grace, but they have tired too soon and faded too early. A woman should not begin to fade off at 30; she should, with proper attention to diet, sleep and systematic life in the open, be far lovelier then than at 20 and little older in appearance. Considering woman as an individual, there is no one less able than he to bear the burdens of life.

A JUDGE'S WIFE CURED OF PELVIC CATARRH.

She Suffered for Years and Felt Her Case Was Hopeless—Cured by Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. Judge McAllister writes from 1217 West 33rd st., Minneapolis, Minn., as follows:

"I suffered for years with a pain in the small of my back and right side. It interfered often with my domestic and social duties and I never supposed that I would be cured, as the doctor's medicine did not seem to help me any.

"Fortunately a member of our Order advised me to try Peruna and gave it such high praise that I decided to try it. Although I started in with little faith, I felt so much better in a week that I felt encouraged.

"I took it faithfully for seven weeks and am happy indeed to be able to say that I am entirely cured. Words fail to express my gratitude. Perfect health once more is the best thing I could wish for, and thanks to Peruna I enjoy that now."—Minnie E. McAllister.

The great popularity of Peruna as a catarrh remedy has tempted many people to imitate Peruna. A great many so-called catarrh remedies and catarrhal tonics are to be found in many drug stores. These remedies can be procured by the druggist much cheaper than Peruna. Peruna can only be obtained at a uniform price, and no druggist can get it a cent cheaper.

Thus it is that druggists are tempted to substitute the cheap imitations of Peruna for Peruna. It is done every day without a doubt.

We would therefore caution all people against accepting these substitutes. Insist upon having Peruna. There is no other internal remedy for catarrh that will take the place of Peruna. Allow no one to persuade you to the contrary.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.
