Some Facts Worth Pondering.

State School Superintendent Fowler, in a public address at Albion, said that school boards change teachers too often; that the average life in the profession of the teachers of Nebraska is but four years and that Nebraska requires 2,000 new teachers yearly. The average salary of Nebraska teachers is $255 a year. He believes in a sliding scale of wages for teachers who are kept from year to year. He denies that our children cannot spell as well as ourselves or our grandparents. He questions the advisability of putting so much time upon some things in arithmetic, such as taxes, partial payments, insurance, bonds, etc., but would spend more time in mental arithmetic. He spoke strongly in favor of teaching music in the schools and instead of teaching arithmetic one hour a day and music ten minutes, would teach music one hour and arithmetic ten minutes.
