

COL. BECKWITH SAYS:

"I Take Pleasure in Commending Pe-ru-na For Coughs and Colds."

COL. PAUL E. BECKWITH

Colonel Paul E. Beckwith, Lt. Col., retired, 1st Reg. Minute Men, in a letter from 1503 Vermont avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C., writes: "From the unqualified endorsement of many of my friends, I take pleasure in commending your remedies for coughs and colds."—Paul E. Beckwith.

IN FIELD OR BARRACKS PE-RU-NA IS EFFICACIOUS.

The constant exposure to the elements experienced in an out-door life is not so apt to cause coughs and colds as sedentary habits.

Those who are brought face to face with the weather every day in active life are much less liable to catarrhal diseases than those who are housed up in ill ventilated rooms. And yet both of these classes are more or less subject to catarrh and catarrhal diseases. The soldier as well as the civilian finds it frequently necessary to use Peruna on account of coughs and colds.

No one is exempt. The strong and healthy are less liable than the weak and ill, but none entirely escape.

Peruna has always been a great favorite with the military men, both in the army and navy.

The strongest kind of testimonials are received from officers of high rank concerning the virtues of Peruna for all catarrhal ailments.

Only a small per cent of these can be used for publication for want of space. Mr. Harrison L. Dean, Burnside Post No. 8, Department of the Potomac, Colonel Encampment No. 60, 8105 Veterans Legion, Colonel Green Clay Smith Regiment No. 17, U. V. U., Department of the Potomac, Military Order Loyal Legion, Department of Columbia, Major 34th Indiana Veteran Volunteer Infantry, writes:

"There is no longer any question as to the curative qualities of Peruna in all catarrhal troubles. Its successful use by many of my friends entitles it to confidence and endorsement."

THE SECRET OF GOOD TIMES.

It was a rainy evening toward the end of the summer, and "the crowd"—the four or five families of friends who had been spending a month together among the Vermont hills—had gathered about the Delands' open fire. Something—perhaps it was the combination of the rain without and the glowing fire within, perhaps it was the thought of autumn and work—seemed to put everybody in a reminiscent mood, and for an hour or so the talk ran upon the doings of their nearly ended holiday.

"If holidays could only last forever!" Maud Hastings sighed.

"Then they wouldn't be holidays," somebody retorted, quickly.

"What makes good times, anyway?" some one else asked.

Their hostess rose with an exclamation of pleasure.

"What a fine question!" she exclaimed. "There are pencils and paper right here. Suppose we each answer it, or try to, and then we'll read the answers aloud. Each one may name three requisites for a good time."

The plan "took" at once, and for a few minutes pencils were busy; then the papers were collected and read aloud. The answers, as was to be expected, revealed very diverse temperaments. The curious thing was that a most unexpected process of elimination began with the reading.

"A book and a shady nook" and time to enjoy them," was the first response.

"A book and time to read it would be enough," some one amended.

"Oh, just a book!" a third corrected. "Sometimes I think you enjoy it most if you can only steal a few minutes at a time."

"Health, a fine day, and all the world before you," another read, to be answered by a chorus of protests over the fine day. Did they not often have their best times on rainy ones? And a fragile girl in the corner added softly, "You don't even have to wait for health."

So the papers went on, and finally a vote was taken, and the things most conducive to good times were decided to be a happy heart, friends and nature. It was the girl in the corner who made her discovery then.

"Why," she exclaimed, "I've so been pitying people who couldn't go away for vacations, but after all, the best three things are within reach of everybody—if he wants them enough!"

The hostess, gathering up the scattered papers, smiled as if something had pleased her.—Youth's Companion.

Cigar Tastes Fading.

"Tastes of smokers have changed very much in the last few years," said a tobacco retailer recently. He had just succeeded in finding a cigar for a fastidious smoker.

"We have very few of the old Havana cigar smokers left. Now, that man who mumbled over the contents of half a dozen boxes said he wanted an imported cigar. He ended by taking a cigar made in this city, and declared that it was one of the best he had ever tasted.

"I don't know how to account for the change, but it is a fact that men who years ago would take nothing but a cigar made of pure Havana tobacco nowadays want cigars that are doctored and faked. Sometimes I think the cigarette habit is responsible for it. Cigarettes are being smoked more than they ever were, and they have created a peculiar taste among smokers.

"Then so many cigars are doctored. These create an appetite which, when once acquired, spoils all other tastes.

"Some years ago men used to ask for Havana cigars and would take nothing else. They could tell a good cigar the moment they saw one, and none of these domestic things could be palmed off on them."—New York Sun.

Considerate of Her Church.

When he had afforded the desired religious consolation, the minister expressed surprise that the family had not summoned local aid.

"Why didn't you folks send for your own minister," asked he. "I understand that you is Baptists. I see a Methodist."

"Well, sah," explained the old man's wife, "de doctah he said de disease was infeckchus."

Billy McLeod, formerly the champion lightweight boxer of England, is one of the officers of the Salvation Army in London. Three street rowdies once thought to have some sport with a Salvationist in the street, and became rudely familiar. Billy approached and quickly rescued the girl, but the offenders resisted. In less time than it takes to record it the rowdies were knocked right and left and soon lay helpless on the pavement. They afterward stated that they felt as if they had been through a sausage machine.

The science of advertising is understood by some of the Russians. In a thoroughfare of St. Petersburg a crowd gathered around a little boy who was crying. A sympathetic gentleman asked him what was the matter, and the lad pitifully responded: "Please, sir, I am lost. Will anybody take me to my father, Ivan Troubetskov, the champion clothier of the East End, who has just got in a stock of winter overcoats, suits, neckties, shirts, hats and umbrellas, which he will sell cheaper than any one in the city?"

The noted German revolutionist, Karl Lind, who has lived in England for many years, recently celebrated his eightieth birthday. He led the revolution in 1848, for which he was condemned to die, but was afterward reprieved, not, however, until he had suffered eight months' solitary confinement.

Even fish are not immune from the spirit rivalry and, perhaps, vanity, of a story which comes from France is to be credited. Anglers over there attach small mirrors to their hooks with very successful results, the idea being that the fish, seeing its reflection in the mirror, will hasten to snatch the bait from its supposed rival.

MR. HAYDEN'S VIEWS

GIVES HIS OPINION OF THE BEST TREATMENT FOR PARALYSIS.

Declares That Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Restored the Use of His Limbs When All Other Remedies Failed.

The premonitory symptoms of paralysis were: trembling of the hands; sudden loss of power in arms or legs, frequently affecting one whole side of the body; staggering; partial or entire inability to use the fingers; distortion of the features, sometimes an uncontrollable quivering of the chin; severe pains; difficulty in speech. Frequently the first warning is a vague feeling of headache, vertigo and muscular weakness.

In a recent interview Mr. W. J. L. Hayden said: "I truly thank that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a great medicine for they cured me when physicians and other remedies had failed to give me the slightest relief. Too close attention to business brought on an attack of nervousness which finally developed into paralysis. There were times when it was impossible for me to move my hands or to get up from a chair. At other times I had partial control of my limbs, but I was afraid to go far from the house for fear I might suddenly become helpless and have to be carried home.

"While I was in this miserable condition, I was stricken with malarial fever and confined to bed for four months. I had the best physicians, but while they relieved my fever, their treatment did not entirely drive the malaria from my system, and they did not help my paralysis in the least.

"I was well nigh despairing when a friend persuaded me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. When I had finished one box I could see results that encouraged me. My condition kept steadily improving, and when I had taken seven boxes I was cured of paralysis and the malaria was completely driven out of my system. For two years now I have enjoyed the best of health and have attended to business without any interruption."

Mr. Hayden's home is at No. 222 West 39th street, New York. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured many similar cases of paralysis, also locomotor ataxia. They are sold by all druggists. A treatment so simple, inexpensive and successful should be tried by every sufferer from partial paralysis in any of its stages.
