The Auburn Herald says politics should not enter seriously into the county campaign, but in the same article advises every one to vote the fusion ticket. Consistent, isn't it? But the republicans are willing to let the people vote for the best men, regardless of party. If this is done, the republicans have no fear whatever of the result.

A few years ago the alliance and the populist or people's independent party were almost synonymous terms. The county alliance passed an order prohibiting members from talking with politicians belonging to either of the old parties. Several of the subordinate alliances passed resolutions boycotting the Advertiser and the Post. Who would believe it now if they did not know it?

The campaign is almost at an end, and we have never heard a word against J. M. Wright's fitness for the position of county clerk. Not one of his most bitter opponents have ever claimed that the office was ever better conducted by any one than by Mac Wright. He will serve the county efficiently. He is familiar with the work. We believe he will be elected by a good majority.

At the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. M. H. Carman, in Johnson county at four o'clock on Sunday afternoon, Rev. B. W. Marsh officiating, Dr. W. A. The happy couple took Monday's train for Lincoln for a brief stay and will soon be at home to their friends in Auburn. The Granger congratulates Mr. Goslee and in behalf of the many friends of the couple extends best wishes.—Granger.

The new school law requires every superintendent to have a first grade certificate to render him eligible to that office. One-third of the candidates for that office in the state are not thus qualified. In order that they may qualify themselves State Superintendent McBrien has issued notice of special examinations to be held at the county seat towns, conducted by the city superintendent or high school principal on Friday and Saturday of this week, when candidates for county superintendents only who are not now holding first grade certificates may be examined.

By this deal the Herald becomes the property of the organization which is composed of the following parties: G. M. Miller, John W. Barnhart, John H. Kearnes, G. W. Thomas, J. W. Roscow, C. J. Lynch, E. B. Quackenbush, O. F. Harlar, Fred Schriefer, W. M. Clark, Geo. Hurley, W. A. Gilmore, A. C. Keplinger, W. H. Kellemeir, W. E. Daugherty, Frank C. Bell, M. Scott, W. W. Scamman, N. E. In the last week's Granger was an article accusing J. M. Wright of misappropriating county funds in 1896. Now we would like to ask this guardian of the county funds who wrote the article, why he did not make the charge against Mr. Wright at the time, why did he keep quiet for six years and who was the chairman of the county board at the time the county was robbed, and why did he not sign his name to the article, instead of hiding behind the chairman of the Democratic and Populist committee. Now the man who will make such a charge at this late day, and not sign his name, knows there is nothing in it, but thinks he can fool some of the voters. It is nothing but political rot, and will be treated as such by every fair minded man.—Howe in Granger.

J. STERLING MORTON'S MONUMENT

Agent Wheelton sold 46 tickets to Nebraska City Saturday. Eleven of our citizens went on the morning freight and the remainder on the excursion. The latter train had on eight coaches here, and three more were added at Peru. There was plenty of room going up, but coming back everything was crowded as far as Peru as those who went on the freight came back on the excursion. The train got to the city about one o'clock, and the excursionists then had to walk a mile and three-quarters to the park where the unveiling ceremonies took place.

At 2:20 the president of the day, John W. Steinhart, called the audience to order. Right Rev. A. L. Williams, D. D., of Omaha, made a prayer. Mr. Steinhart then gave the introductory address, giving facts and figures regarding the monument. Gov. Mickey gave the address of welcome, and then ex-President Cleveland gave the principal address of the day. He was followed by Hon. Hilary A. Herbert, ex-Secretary of the Navy, by ex-Vice President Stevenson, and by ex-Secretary of the Interior Francis. Dr. Geo. L. Miller of Omaha made the closing address.

Among the prominent persons present, in addition to the speakers, were Paul Morton, late Secretary of the Navy and at present president of the Equitable Life Insurance Co; Joy and Mark Morton, his brothers, sons of the late J. Sterling Morton; Mrs. Grover Cleveland; ex-Senator Dietrich; Senator Burkett, and many other noted men from all sections of the United States.

After the speaking was over Sterling Morton, oldest grandson of the late J. Sterling Morton, unveiled the monument.

The Granger advocates voting independent—vote for the man—pay no attention to party—principle is nothing—the man is everything. And yet we remember when the Granger scored everybody that would not vote the ticket of the party whose principles it advocated just at that time—which happened to be the prohibition party. The man did not count—it was the principle at that time. Later the paper took up the cause of the populist party—free silver without the aid and consent, etc.—and everyone was urged to vote for principle—no republican, no matter how honest ought to get any man's vote. Now the Granger is "independent"—but not enough so to advocate the election of any republican no matter how much better qualified he may be for office than the man opposing him.

An illustration of "what is one man's meat is another's poison," is shown in the fact that in Indiana a man has a "dock farm." The ordinary burdock is grown and it is claimed that the crop from one acre is worth $200. While it is apparent that this weed pest is hard to get rid of in fence corners, it is said to be a hard crop to grow when wanted for commercial purposes. The root is used in some medical preparation. The Japs do not consider the dock as a weed, but they cultivate it as an article of food, using it for flavoring soups, and it is said to resemble an artichoke in taste.
