

W. W. Liebhart had bad luck with a recent sale of a barred Plymouth Rock cockrell he made to an Oklahoma party. The bird was a good one but some one stole it en route and substituted a very inferior one. Mr. Liebhart at first suspected that the Oklahoma purchaser was trying to get out of paying for the fowl, but affidavits were sent him showing the kind of a cockrell arrived there, and he was convinced that the trouble was made by some one trading cockrells on the road. He returned the money he had received for the bird.

The meetings at the Methodist church closed Sunday night. They lasted for four weeks, the first week being conducted by the pastor, Rev. G. W. Ayers, until Saturday night, and since that time, with the exception of one night last week, by the conference evangelist, Rev. W. H. Prescott. Meetings were held every night and for the last three weeks every afternoon. Children's meetings were held at the close of school for two weeks. Bro. Prescott is an earnest, consecrated worker. Seven persons united with the church Sunday night.

To all to whom these presence may come, greeting:

In a short address delivered at the 87th anniversary of the I. O. O. F., Nemaha, Nebraska, I used some statistics in comparison of church and lodge benevolences, which I understand have lately been questioned, and in order to set these figures before the public and my authority for using same I will on Sunday evening, Feb. 3, preach upon the subject of "Church Benevolence and Fraternalism," and earnestly beg all members of all lodges in Nemaha to be present, together with any who may question the figures I used in the above mentioned address. Respectfully,
J. W. SAPP.

The Burlington bridge gang has been working near Nemaha for some time and it will take them some time longer to do all the work laid out for them. Last week they shoved the big iron bridge across the Nemaha river south of town one and a quarter inches north, as it was that much out of line with the road. They have put in an entire new bridge recently except the iron work and new trestles for the approaches, putting in seventeen spans. This work took them sixteen days. They will now work on bridge 7, at McCandless siding, bridge 3, at Alf Kinton's, and bridges 16 and 17, the other side of Shubert, making their headquarters at Nemaha.

A Reader of The Advertiser for Fifty Years

Dr. C. F. Stewart of Auburn has been a subscriber and reader of The Nebraska Advertiser for fifty years. He located in Brownville early in the year 1857, subscribed for the Advertiser at once, and has been a subscriber ever since. He is the oldest subscriber on the subscription list of the Advertiser. Not many newspapers in this state have subscribers who have taken the paper for half a century.

The editor had the pleasure of an interesting talk with Dr. Stewart Tuesday, and talked over old times, when we ate bread made from shorts, drank coffee made from wheat and parched corn, tea made from native herbs, etc. This was in early days in Nemaha county when it was hard to get anything to eat. But as the doctor says, "Everybody enjoyed themselves then even if the times were hard." Everybody was on an equality.

W. W. Stokes, who is employed with the Burlington bridge gang, got a hard fall last Friday. He was working on the bridge across the Nemaha river south of town when the rod with which he was turning a jack screw slipped out and he was thrown to the frozen ground. He fell only six or eight feet but was badly shaken up and bruised and his left hand sprained. He felt sore for several days.
