WAR AS ROOSEVELT SEES IT

Helps to Break the Barriers of Social Cast, he Said.

President Roosevelt made a speech on patriotism and good citizenship at the dedication of the monument erected in the National cemetery at Arlington to the memory of the "Rough Riders" of the Spanish-American war. The President spoke of the bitter grief war entails. "The deepest woe, however," he said, "the grief hardest to bear must come not to those who go to war, but to the women and children who stay behind."

The President spoke of the admiration felt by those who served in the volunteer forces for the officers and enlisted men of the regular army and navy. He was sure all volunteers came out of the war feeling as he did, that it should be their aim thereafter to do everything that lay in their power for the army and navy of the Union which, by their readiness for war make the greatest guaranty for peace this country possesses.

"The man you cared for in the war," the President said, "was the man who did his plain duty right along just as it came, from digging sinks and policing camp to leading a forlorn hope. All of this contains just the lesson we need most in our civil life. We could not get on in the army, we never could conduct a war to a successful conclusion, if we permitted ourselves to be sundered by any class or caste or social or sectional or religious prejudice; and we cannot conduct the affairs of this nation as they can and shall be conducted save by putting into effect the same traits that enable us to do well in war."

After referring to the dead, the President said:

"The supreme lesson for all of us is that homage that counts is the homage, not of the lips, but of the heart: the homage we pay to the memory of the valiant dead when we firmly resolve so to lead our lives that when we die we may feel not wholly unworthy to have been their comrades."

QUAKER REFLECTIONS.

The Kiss.

It has no value for only one person.

It is the expression of supreme happiness for two persons.

The child gets it gratis.

The young man steals it.

The old man buys it.

"You Never Can Tell."

Maj. Spilker is a little man, very fat, very genial, and with a head as devoid of hair as a porcelain door knob. His wife, Mrs. Algitha Spilker is scrawny, sarcastic and deaf. A person could kick a tin bathtub down the back steps all night, and Mrs. Spilker would snore like a brass horn in blissful ignorance of the noise, which proves that she is rather deaf.

There are two things in the world of which Mrs. Spilker is very fond—a party and her husband. She never fails to accept an invitation to one, or to carry the other with her.

Not long ago they attended a birthday party, and the major was down to propose the health of "The Babies." Being very fond of children, it was thought that this toast would just suit the major.

Unfortunately for Maj. Spilker and the assembled guests, he changed his toast to "The Ladies" without warning his wife of the fact, who, of course, thought her husband would confine himself to the toast of the little ones.

"Now, Maj. Spilker, said Mrs. Barker, the hostess, as the dinner advanced, "it is your turn to give your toast, and pray say something complimentary to our sex."

"When my charming hostess," said the major rising, "requests me to do a thing, it is my duty to obey. Therefore I take pleasure in drinking the health of the ladies. The ladies cherish us in prosperity, soothe us in adversity, and, by their tender ministrings, lighten the burden of life. I drink to the ladies."

When the applause subsided, Mrs. Spilker, ignorant of the true subject of the toast, but glowing with pride and admiration, said:

"Oh, Mrs. Barker, you don't know how fond the major is of them. I have seen him have two or three on his lap at once, and—"

"Algitha!" gasped the major.

"—Just teasing the life out of the poor, dear things. He is such a favorite with them, and every change he gets he is sure to have them in his arms or be romping with them. He's got the loveliest nature of any man I ever saw, and somehow they come to him when they won't to any one else."

Maj. Spilker fell back in his chair with a groan.—Tit-Bits.

Organ to Save a Woodpile.

A number of years ago a village in the eastern part of the town of Middleboro, was very much wrought up over the introduction of a musical instrument in their church service. At the final meeting when the matter was to be settled excitement ran high.

One man whose reputation for honest dealings was not always above suspicion made a fiery speech in opposition. A neighbor whose back yard joined the speaker's, could hardly wait for the close of the remarks. Then jumping to his feet without waiting to address the chairman he said:

"Gosh, sir, if I had known the gentleman was so afraid of an organ I should have had one hung on my woodpile years ago."—Boston Herald.

Couples without children, young married people being preferred, applying for quarters in a new $50,000 apartment-house, which Architect W. P. White has designed for Queen Anne hill, Seattle, will be informed that everything has been taken. The best reference a prospective tenant can offer will be a string of youngsters. Fouts & Williams, who are furnishing the capital for the structure, are both heads of large families. The halls and rooms will be designed for the pattering of little feet. Dark wainscoting will hide the marks of grimy hands, and one whole floor will be devoted to nurseries and playrooms. The stork apartments will be erected in the heart of a fashionable residence district, opening directly on to Kinnear Park, the most beautiful park in the city. The building will be four stories high, and will accommodate upward of fifty families.

At Port Florence, on the shore of the great Lake Victoria Nyanza, which is the chief source of the Nile, there is a dry dock cut out of solid rock by natives who had never before done much serious work. The dock is 250 feet long, 48 feet wide and 14 feet deep. It is 3,700 feet above the level of the sea, or nearly three times the altitude of Lake Chautauqua.

You can't judge a man's wealth by the size of his bluff.

The Evolution of Household Remedies

The modern patent medicine business is the natural outgrowth of the old time household remedies.

In the early history of this country EVERY FAMILY HAD ITS HOME-MADE MEDICINES. Herb teas, biters, laxatives and tonics, were to be found in almost every house, compounded by the housewife, sometimes assisted by the apothecary or the family doctor. Such remedies as picra, which was aloes and quassia, dissolved in apple brandy. Sometimes a hop tonic made of whiskey, hops and bitter barks. A score or more of popular, home-made remedies were thus compounded, the formulae for which were passed along from house to house, sometimes written, sometimes verbally communicated.

The patent medicine business is a natural outgrowth from this wholesome, old time custom. In the beginning, some enterprising doctor, impressed by the usefulness of one of these home made remedies, would take it up, improve it in many ways, manufacture it on a large scale, advertise it mainly through almanacs for the home, and thus it would become used over a large area. LATTERLY THE HOUSEHOLD REMEDY BUSINESS TOOK A MORE EXACT AND SCIENTIFIC FORM.

Peruna was originally one of these old time remedies. It was used by the Mennonites, of Pennsylvania, before it was offered to the public for sale. Dr. Hartman THE ORIGINAL COMPOUNDER OF PERUNA, is of Mennonite origin. First, he prescribed it for his neighbors and his patients. The sale of it increased, and at last he established a manufactory and furnished it to the general drug trade.

Peruna is useful in a great many climatic ailments, such as coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, and catarrhal diseases generally. THOUSANDS OF FAMILIES HAVE LEARNED THE USE OF PERUNA and its value in the treatment of these ailments. They have learned to trust and believe in Dr. Hartman's judgment and to rely on his remedy, Peruna.
