THE REPUBLICAN TRIUMPH. From the Sioux City Journal

It is a magnificent victory which the Republican party has won in Ohio. Majo McKinley's leadership and triumph are the notable facts of Tuesday's contest. They demonstrate that the old spirit of national republicanism is yet abroad in the land.

The victory in Ohio is complete. Not only does McKinley himself sweep the state, but the whole Republican ticket is emphatically elected. Moreover, the Republicans seize the legislature, in spite of the Democratic gerrymander, with a grip that means not only the election of a United States senator, but also that they will tighten it in next year's struggle.

There is no mistaking the significance of the Republican triumph of Ohio. Its significance relates to national policies, and it certifies that the people of Ohio are with the Republican party-are with it enthusiastically and irrevesibly.

The result in other states turned on local issues. In New York the contest was purely local. The illegitimate world's fair issue was used successfully to conjure with. In Iowa the central issue related to local liquor legislation. Analogous local issues largely determined the result in nearly all the other states that voted Tuesday. But in Ohio the contest was squarly joined on national issues. There was considerable disaffection toward Governor Campbell in Cincinnati, it is true, but the returns demonstrate that this fact was not decisive. The Democratic party in Ohio deliberately challenged the two great points of record freshly made by the Republican party on the tariff and on the money question. The emphasis of the Democratic platform was put upon tariff for revenue only and free and unlimited silver coinage. Indeed, the Ohio Democrats went far out of their way to arraign and denounce the Republican party on these points.

The Republican party met its antagonist fully half way. The nomination of Maj. McKinley alone was a notable defiance. He promptly went before the people to champion the policy of which the tariff measure which bears his name is illustrative. John Sberman as promptly came forward as the advocate of the cause of good money and honest finance. There was no dodging. There was no apology. The Republicans made an aggressive fight from the day of their nomination till the closing of polls, staking all upon popular approval of the policies of essential national Republicanism.

It is to be said likewise that the Dem ocratic party made a vigorous fight in Ohio. After deliberately challenging the silver legislation of the Republican party the Democrats attempted to dodge that issue, but they fought strenuously on the tariff issue. They called to their aid many of the recognized leaders of the Democratic party, like Mills, Carltsle, Springer and McMillan, who demanded a verdict on the question of substituting the British for the protective revenue

This was not all. It was agreed on all sides that the campaign in Ohio was a test. The attention of the whole country thus turned to Ohio as an indication of popular judgment on the tariff after the people had had the better part of a year to see and reflect upon the workings of the legislation of the last congress.

Those importers of the eastern seaboard cities who feel that their interest is against the development of manufacturing industry in the United States, since they desire to handle the foreign supply, took a strong hand in the Democratic fight against McKinley, contributing large funds and every other influnce in their power. There can hardly be a doubt that the English manufactures also sent over large funds to be used against Ohio Republicans, believing, as was certainly true, that his defeat this year would tend powerfully to help the Democratic party next year and thus to create a boom in English industry.

Under all these circumstances to avoid defeat at all in Ohio would have been a significant Republican victory. To sweep the state by an immense Republican majority is a notable Republican triumph.

Republicans may well take courage from the Ohio verdict. They may well enter with confidence the struggle next year in which the same question will be decisively submitted to the people of the United States.

Mr. Howells' New Novel.

It is announced that Mr. Howells' new novel will not go to the Harpers, as has been the custom with all that the novelist has written for some years past, but that it has been bought by the Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia, and it will be published in that periodical. Mr. Howells has been induced to make this change of publishers for his next novel because of the financial inducements offered by the Journal management, and of the enormous audience which his work will command through this periodical. The story is one distinctly for girls, and will portray the life of a western girl in New York City

Itch, mange and scratches of every kind, on human or animals, cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. This never fails. Sold by Morris & Co., druggist.
