

LATE MARKETABLE NEWS

Item of Interest to Dealers and Agriculturalists.

News From the Great Cattle and Sheep Ranges and the Markets Where These Products Are Sold—Marketable Notes.

The grass rent on the Crow reservation amounts to $20,000 a year.

The number of cattle ready for shipment from Canadian, Tex., is so large that the owners cannot get cars to ship them to market.

Alfalfa hay is selling in some sections of the Arkansas valley at $3.50 a ton in stack. If fed upon the farm it pays handsomely at this figure.

Don't try to winter more cattle than you have feed for. Most any disposition you can make of them now is better than having them die on your hands.

Now is the time to clean out the scrub and inferior bulls. They will bring fair prices on the market, while if permitted to run they will prove a curse to the herds.

A party of cattle feeders of Mexico, Mo., took a trainload of cattle to Chicago recently consisting of dehorned shorthorns and received from $5.05 to $6.25 a hundred for them, 50 cents above the market with 23,000 head on hand.

A breeder declares that if a cow should be born without a tail she might be used as the founder of a family of tailless cattle. Of course he expresses himself in this way only to emphasize the fact that any peculiarity may be bred into or out of animals.

A pure-bred Shorthorn heifer was born hornless several weeks ago. She was also born polled; these were carefully saved, and in time a strain of polled Shorthorns was produced.

Stock Growers' Journal: Range conditions in eastern Montana are better than they have been for years. The growth of grass was, as is well known, luxuriant, and the fall weather has cured it so as to give it abundant nutrition. Nothing but a snowfall of unusual depth, followed by unusual winds and thaws, can render the winter range doubtful. There will be lots of feed and cattle will go through fat and sleek.

Chicago Evening Journal: "We can see no reason to expect any material advance on hogs," says a well-known commission man. "Neither do we expect to see much decline from present prices. The shipping demand has been less than expected and the provision trade shows no improvement, but hogs are pretty low and there is not so much room to drop as there was. We think those that start in now to buy and ship hogs during the season will lose no money."

A Berlin dispatch says: The Bremen senate has issued a decree permitting the importation of British and American cattle for breeding purposes on the presentation of a certificate of origin and a satisfactory report from the state veterinarian. Cattle imported for other purposes than breeding will be isolated for one month and kept under observation by the state veterinarian at the expense of the parties concerned. Any breach of the regulations will subject the offenders to fines and other penalties.

Sawdust and leaves from the woods make bedding for cattle that should not be neglected. They should be gathered in autumn and stored away for winter use. Ordinary straw bedding does not absorb the liquid so well as sawdust and a good foundation can be made with this absorbent. In the winter time the liquid manure settles in pools in places after a rain and if these pools are filled in with sawdust there will be a great saving. It is well to have leaves or sawdust on hand through the winter for such emergency.

In China sheep are usually kept in flocks of from 500 to 2,000. The wool is generally shorn, but in some parts it is combed from the backs of the sheep with wide combs and twisted into balls. Sometimes it is twisted into ropes and made up into coils in the interior for transportation to the coast. The balls weigh about 150 pounds. The bulk of what is commercially known as China wool comes from Mongolia. The principal uses to which wool is put in China are the manufacture of a coarse felt, which is converted into shoes and hats, and a finer felt used for packing around bales of furs transported from the north.

The Live Stock Indicator says that E. R. Hardy, of Abingdon, Ill., who has long been successfully engaged in the breeding of Galloway cattle, is now also engaged in the tanning of the hides of Galloway, Angus, Shorthorn, Red Polled, Jersey and Holstein cattle; and the manufacture of such articles as overcoats, suits, collars and cuffs, ladies' coats and jackets, that are equal in beauty, and superior in wearing qualities, to the same articles made of costly furs or the skins of other animals. The use of the hides of the finest breeds of cattle opens up a new and profitable field for the breeders of the animals mentioned above.

The Mexican orange trade with the United States is gradually increasing. From December 20 to June 8, 1888, only 6,740 boxes were shipped into the United States from Mexico, whereas from November 2, 1890, to February 13, 1891, 18,940 boxes, valued at about $24,000, were imported. The average number of oranges in a box was 145. They were distributed as follows: Los Angeles, 630; Kansas City, 3,047; Chicago, 3,303; Lincoln, Neb., 330; Nogales, 336; San Francisco, 501; Omaha, 960; St. Joseph, Mo., 829; the entire city, 900; Denver, 2,365; Albuquerque, 945, and Minneapolis, 330 boxes.

Twin City, Minn., Reporter: The market for live stock promises to be a good one during the coming winter. The general good feeling that prevails, and the strong confidence in the business world is certain to have its marked effect in all channels of trade, and the live stock business and kindred interests will share the successes with the rest of the commercial world. Securities are firm, and the faith that business men have in the good times coming is strengthening the backbone of commerce. The live stock market furnishes ample evidence that business is better than the coming winter will witness. No calamities in this line. While values have not made the marked advance predicted some months since, there is nothing to foreshadow any decline, but everything to indicate that prices will be better. With the range stock of the market, the native cattle will be relied upon to fill the demand, and fat stock will figure conspicuously on the markets before next spring. Cattle should be held until properly fattened and the owners will find it beat compound interest to do this. While hogs are temporarily on the decline, they are 25 to 30 cents higher than a year ago, and with European markets opening their gates to our products, and a shortage for winter packing an increased demand will be the result. This, with the use of home consumption means a firm and higher market. The outlook is certainly promising and the stockman who breeds and feeds for market need have no doubts about the future of the live stock market.

BERMUDA CEDARS.

They Furnished Wood for a Ship for Sir George Somers in 1599.

An interesting thing about the Bermuda cedar is its ability to grow apparently equally well in very different situations. It flourishes on the dry porous limestone hills and grows as freely on the brackish swamp lands which occur in some parts of the islands. It is not unusual to find trees of a wide geographical range and and therefore subject to different climatic surroundings, which seek to adapt themselves to them by securing situations which in one region are at the sea level and in others are at the top of high mountains.

Many conifers which grow at the north at the sea level are found in the south at considerable elevations above the ocean, and the red cedar itself, which grows at the north on high, dry uplands, inhabits in Florida swamps which are inundated during a considerable part of the year, and in the dry climate of the western part of the continent occurs only at high elevations. But the Bermuda cedar grows as well in one place as it does in another, although climatic conditions do not of course differ perceptibly in different parts of this small group of islands.

Large individuals are no longer common; the ax of the wood-cutter and the ship-builder long ago swept them away. Here and there a venerable trunk may still be found, but among the large trees still growing on the island very few probably are much more than a century old or large enough to possess any great commercial value. Formerly the wood was much used in ship-building; and it is interesting to note that Henry May, an English sailor who was wrecked on the Bermuda islands in 1593 and who afterward printed the first account of them, escaped with his companions to the banks of Newfoundland in a vessel which they were able to make from the cedar wood.

The same wood, twenty-seven years later, furnished the material from which Admiral Sir George Somers, who the year before had been wrecked on the islands, while in command of the Sea Adventure, constructed the vessel which carried him to the relief of the infant colony of Virginia, and in which his body was afterward borne back to his native land.

Beautiful and very lasting furniture, too, was once made on the islands from the cedar wood, and old cedar chests and cabinets 200 years old and more are still held as heirlooms by the descendants of some old Bermuda families, who still live in houses finished with this wood, which grows with age rich and dark in color like mahogany.

KISSING THE BABIES.

A Mother Who Doesn't Like Her Little Ones to be Obscured by Strangers.

"I suppose I was very abrupt, and perhaps disagreeable," said a mother of two or three pretty children, as they came from an outing; "but I assure you I could not help it. There is nothing that occurs to me when I am out with the children which annoys me more than to have strangers literally pounce upon the babies and cover their faces with kisses. Of course I wouldn't have common sense if I did not know that they are extra pretty children. I have heard it ever since they were born, and I certainly ought to have learned it by heart by this time. If I didn't know it any other way I should very soon do so for the marked attention they always receive in public, but I will not allow this promiscuous kissing. The woman who annoyed me was a middle-aged person with the most atrocious set of teeth, or rather the remains of them, that I ever saw. Her breath was almost intolerable even at the distance which I stood from her, and I noticed that the baby turned his face away in disgust. Of course I hated to tell her that I never permitted strangers to kiss the children. All the same, I did tell it and am not sorry.

"It is for this reason, largely that I go out myself when the children are taking their airing. I find that nurse girls will not guard them against this danger, and I can't permit them to run the risk of getting all sorts of infections and diseases that I know must come from such a condition of the mouth. People really seem to have not the slightest idea that they are guilty of a rudeness in offering to kiss other people's children, but I consider it such, notwithstanding the fact that I know I am expected to take it as a compliment.

"I assure you, however, that I would rather such compliments were omitted altogether. I will not engage a nurse girl with poor teeth or offensive breath or one who has any disease of the lungs, throat or head. I don't think it is safe to do so, and, therefore, I make the most rigid inquiries in this respect; and good health and a clean mouth are among the imperative demands when I engage such servants."

Arkansas Girls.

A story comes from Mountain Home, Ark., of two girls, Mary Welles and Julia Roberts, living on adjoining farms. They are typical Arkansas girls and can handle a rifle better than most men in their neighborhood, so they do not hesitate to tackle the biggest game in the woods.

During one of their hunting trips lately they went to a wild turkey roost, built a blind and waited. As they lay in ambush they heard the approach of what they supposed was a man, but it turned out to be a bear. Mary fired at it, and the animal, maddened by the pain, made a dash at the girls, catching Mary. She screamed, and as she was being dragged away Julia ran close to the bear, and placing the muzzle of her shotgun, which had a heavy charge of turkey shot, behind his shoulder, fired, tearing a hole clear through him. He dropped in his tracks. With the exception of a few bruises and a slightly lacerated arm Mary was unharmed. The girls are the heroines of the country.

A Conscientious Clergyman.

Stranger—What has become of Rev. Mr. De Goode?

Resident—He made himself so unpopular preaching against envy, hatred, malice, backbiting, cheating and polite lying that one congregation after another drove him out, and finally he had to learn a trade to make a living.

Not unusual. Where is he now? He's a down town shoemaker, and is now able, without straining his conscience, to make his patrons shoes which do not pinch.

Too Suggestive.

Miss De Pretty—Let's form a secret society.

Miss De Pink—Let's. Just like the Odd Fellows and Red Men. Call it the "Ancient Order of—of Kings' Daughters."

Miss De Blond—Or the "Ancient Order of Dianans."

Miss De Young—Or the "Ancient Order of American—"

Miss Oldmaid—Oh, don't let's call it the Ancient Order of anything.

Making Their Election Sure.

Great Editor—Were the nominations made today?

Sub-Editor—Yes, sir. Convention just adjourned.

Did the other party get through too? No, sir. The balloting won't begin until tomorrow.

Good! Hurry up and claim that our candidates are lovers of base ball but before the other party gets a chance.

Could Happen Only in the West.

Mr. Searle—Suppose we compromise this Hopkins-Searle case. What'll you take?

Timothy Hopkins—What'll you give? Mr. Searle—Five millions.

Timothy Hopkins—Bah! Do you take me for a pauper?

A Crisis in Spain.

Queen of Spain—Moi Gracia! The baby king has the stomach-ache.

Lord Chamberlain (excitedly)—Woo-oo! Call the Secretary of the interior!

Humidity About.

Guest (at restaurant in moist weather)—Waiter, I can't get any salt out of this salt cellar.

Waiter—You've forgotten to unscrew the top, sir.

Needed Advice.

Miss Passee—Here is an article in this paper on "The girl to be avoided."

Mr. Greateatch—Yes, I know. The girl who wants to get married.
