NUTRIMENT IN EQUS.

ir Value as a Food and Their Use in Certain Diseases

Six large eggs will weigh about a pound. As a flesh producer one pound of eggs is equal to one pound of beef. About one-third of the weight of an egg is solid nutriment, which is more than can be said of meat. There are no bones and tough pieces that have to be laid aside. Practically the egg is animal food and yet there is none of the disagreeable work of the butcher necessary to obtain it. Eggs at average prices are among the cheapest and ost nutritious articles of diet. Like milk, an egg is complete food in itself, containing everything necessary for the development of a perfect animal. It is also easily digested, if not dameged in cooking, indeed, there is no more concentrated and nourishing food than eggs.

The albumen, oil and saline matter are, as in milk, in the right proportion for sustaining animal life. The valuable or important salts are contained in the yolk, and hence this portion of the egg is most useful in some forms of disease. A weakly person, in whom nerve force is deficient and the blood impoverished, may take the yolk of egg with advantage. The iron and the phosphoric compounds are in a condition to be easily assimlated, and although homospathic in quantity, nevertheless exert a marked influence on the system. The yolks of eggs, containing as they do, less albu-men, are not so injuriously affected by heat as the whites, and a hard-boiled yoke may be usually eaten by invalids without inconvenience.

ing man at the Northwestern station in Chicago. "Yes, sir," replied the officer. "Wall, I want to know how these confidence men work?" "In various wars fometimes they borrow money and give a worthless check on a basic." "They do, sh?" gasped the man, with a sudden start. "Yes; or perhaps they borrow money and turn over a check for a trunk. When you go to look for the trunk it is not to be found." is not to be found."

"By George!" muttered the man. en again they sell you a bogus

"Four different ways!" shouted the man, as he jumped clear of the floor.

"And I ll be hanged if I haven't be taken in on every one of 'em in a ride of a hundred miles! Say, come down and show me the river-the deepest spot in the river-the place where I drop in and wen't never come to the surface again with my dough-filled head."

THE LITTLE BIRD.

The Latest Form of Literary Hysterics Touched Upon.

The little bird stood on the roof of the cowshed and scratched its neck. Afar down the alley a lone ragman drove his chariat slowly along and chanted his plaintive lay. The wind saned through the chimney pots, the

A CUNNING ELEPHANT.

Can Run a Penny-in-the-Slot Business But Cannot Count.

The tricks of the marvelous performing elephants exhibited in London a few years ago seem fairly eclipsed by the feats of the elephants at the Belle Vue Gardens, Manchester, of which, by way of an example of the intelligence of brutes, Mr. George Fremantle has sent an account. When penny is given to one of these animals it puts the coin into the slot of the box, where, as it falls, it releases biscuit, which the elephant takes with evident satisfaction.

Some of the visitors occasionally give the animals a half penny, and as experience has taught them that this coin is of no value for the purpose of obtaining biscuits, it is generally thrown contemptuously back to the giver. A more marvelous fact, however, is to come.

One day a visitor gave the "baby" elephant a number of half pennies in uccession, each of which was thrown at him again as soon as received. The visitor then gave the animal two half pennies at the same time.

The animal's demeanor immediately hanged. For more than five minutes he held the two coins in his trunk, rubbing them together, now rocking from side to side, and presently seeming to be pondering deeply while perfectly still. At last he dropped the two half-pence in the box together, with the result that their combined weight gave him the desired biscuit, at which he gamboled about in a manner which ex-hibited extravagant delight. As yet it appears that the baby elephant has not yet learned to hold one half-penny in reserve until he gets another. "In other words," says Mr. Freemantle, "he has not yet learned to count."

FAME IS EXPENSIVE.

Why a Post Was Obliged to Desert the Muso

There were quadrilles danced by women only to a mixed chorus, without instrumental accompaniment. A young girl sang entrancingly a ron-deau, which must have begged for its pitiful rhymes: a young girl recited an ode wherein the rhyme rang like bells of gold.

"You wrote besutifully then," said to a poet a woman in whites lk, whose chestnut colored hair was streaked with golden locks, "and doubtless write beautifully now, but I have not seen a new poem by you for a long, long time."

"I have ceased to write poems for lack of money," he replied, simply. "Oh!" she exclaimed with unfeigned surprise. "I supposed that poetry and money had nothing in common."

"They haven't," he said. "When I wrote poems I lived with $400 a year. I was wealthier than Astor, and would buy books bound by the Samblanex-Neekesser, but since I became famous -- I beg your pardon for the expression -I became a poor man. I had to furnish a bachelor apartment, to buy silverware and the rest, and in order that I may keep these things I am compelled to write articles for guide books, encyclopedias, dictionaries, and novels published in newspapers that, fortunately, no New Yorker ever reads. I am bound by contracts signed and sealed for ten years. Then I will have forgotten the art of the rhymster. In brief, I ceased to be a poet the day that I became celebrated as a poet."

A MYSTERY OF THE DEEP.

Cholerine in Pennsylvania.

Swickley, Penn .: We had an epidemic of cholerine, as our physicians called it, in this place lately and I made a great hit with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoa Remedy. I sold four dozen bottles of it in one week. and have since sold nearly a gross. Thisremedy did the work and was a big advertisement for me. Several persons who had been troubled with diarrhoea for two or three weeks were cured by a few doses of this medicine.

looked dimly down through the smoke, and the little bird stood on the roof of the cowshed and scratched its neck

The little bird stood on the roof of the cowshed and scratched its neck. Sadly the stray policeman in the gray distance swiped a banans from the cart of a passing Italian and peeled it with a grimy hand. He was thinking, thinking. And the dead leaves still choked the tin spout above the rain water barrel in the back yard.

The little bird stood on the roof of the cowshed and scratched its neck. Adown the gutters in the ione y street ran murky puddles on their long, long journey toward the distant sea. Borne on the wings of the sluggish breeze came a far-off murmur of vagrant dogs in fierce contention, and life was a hollow mockery to the homeless cat.

The little bird stood on the roof of the cowshed and scantched its neck And it softly said: "I scratch because it itches."

Why Hayes Didn't Carry a Watch. Ex-Pres'dent Hayes did not carry a watch, the reason for which peculiarly illustrates one of the traits of his character. It appears that in his younger days the watch he then carried was the cause of sending two men to the penitentiary. It was stolen from his pocket; the thief was captured, tried, convicted and sent to the penitentiary for a term of years. Mr. Hayes recovered his watch and a second time it was stolen. The thief turned out to be a poor man with a large family, and after he had been sent to the penitentiary Mr. Hayes get rid of the cause of so much troubly to his fellow-men. Since then he never owned a watch.

Richest void Mine in the World.

Late reports from the gold mine of Mount Morgan, in Queensland. Australis, the richest in the wor.d. show that the prospecting which has been carried on makes it evident that gold buillion to the value of scores of millions of dollars will be taken from this deposit before it is exhausted. Transitions in value are rarely contrasted more strongly than in this astonishing gold find. Ten years ago the entire hill which goes by the name of Mount rgan was sold for $3,200. Since that time it has paid in dividends to the stockholders in the company that owns the mine more than $15,000,000, with the prospect of almost unlimited payments in the future.

d to signals, But Find no One to Save.

A singular story of the sea is told by Captain Collier, of the British steamship Rock Light, now lying at Philadelphia. While in mid-ocean signals of distress were seen flying from a bark evidently in a sinking condition. The Rock Light bore down to rescue the crew of the sinking craft.

The flags which told the story, according to the international code of signals, were flying from the mizzenmast, and preparations were made for all hands to join in the rescue, but, to the astonishment of all, no one was seen on board. Whistles were blown and halloos shouted from all, but the skipper never came from below.

There was no sign of life on the forecastle, while in the galley everything was in perfect order. Even the pots and pans were as bright as silver. A black cat skipped about the decks, but soon disappeared below when she heard the steamer's shrill whistles.

A short detour of the vessel proved her to be the Norwegian bark Supreme, tumber-laden from a Southern port, out the fate of the crew remains to be solved.

Meaning of the Word "Either."

The legal meaning of the word "either" has been gravely argued in an English sourt of record. A certain testator had left property, the disposition of which was affected by the 'death of either" of two persons. One lawyer insisted that "either" meant both, and in support of his views he quoted Richardson, Webster, Chaucer, Dryden, Southey, the story of the crucifixion and a passage from Revelations. The judge sug-gested that there was a song in "The Beggar's Opera" which took another view, "How happy I could be with either were tother dear charmer away." In pronouncing judgment the court ruled that "either" meant one of the two, and did not mean both. He said that it might have that meaning occasionally in poetry, but never in an English court of record.

What Kid Gloves Are Made Of.

Kid gloves are not all made of kid; in fact, few of them are. The cheap ones are not kid, and neither are the dearest ones. Ladies' gloves that cost under $1.50 or $3 a pair are all made of lamb skin. It is likely that gloves paid for at a higher price than that will be of kid, but the very best and most expensive kid gloves are made of the skins of young colts.
