A lady school teacher in Boston, who is rather proud of her profession than the reverse, is not pleased at having her occupation thrust forward when she meets strangers. Not long ago at a reception, the hostess regularly mentioned her occupation in introducing her.

At length the hostess presented a young man, adding to the introduction. as usual, "Miss Fancuil is one of our school teachers."

The gentleman bowed, but Miss Fan-cuil said:

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Allen, but I did not catch what the gentleman's business is."

"What the gentleman's business is?" repeated the hostess in perplexity.
"Yes," Miss Faneuil said, "I thought it only right that this acquaintance should start fair, and as you told him my employment. it seemed only fair that I should know his."

The point was understood, and taken good naturedly, but the teacher was no longer introduced in her official capacity.—Youth's Companion.

Inda Rubber "Paving Stones." New ideas in paving have lately attracted attention. Among these is the paving of a bridge by a German engineer with India rubber, the result having been so satisfactory as to induce its application on a much larger scale, a point in its favor being that it is much more durable than asphalt and not slip-pery. In London a section of roadway under the gate leading to the depart-ment platform of the St. Paneras terminus has for some time past been paved with this material, with the effect of deadening the sound made when being passed over on wheels, besides the com-fortable elasticity afforded to foot pas-sengers. Another material which is being satisfactorily introduced for this purpose is composed of granulated cork and bitumen pressed into blocks and which are laid like bricks or wooden paving, the special advantage secured in this case being that of elasticity.

With the air all ground him luminous with purple haze, through which daszling electric sparks leaped with lightning rapidity, and with brushes of electric flame playing about his fingers and shooting from his heels to the floor, Nikola Tesin, the Hungarian electrician, and the rival of Edison in the almost magic power he exercises over the subtle force, concluded his lecture on the effects of alternating currents amid the thunderous applause of the scientists who crowded the old Franklin institute last evening to hear him, says the Philadelphia Record.

To make good his claim that he has discovered means to harness electric force, so that it shall serve man without injuring him, Tesla allowed a force of 200,000 volts to pass through him and illuminate a bulb containing sulphate of calcium which he held in his hand. The bulb was made to glow with a light so intense as to fill the room with brightness, and to disclose the great electrician helding it sheft was readered. ning rapidity, and with brushes of elec-

"But, gentlemen, this is nothing," enthusiastically continued the inventor, and the audience fully agreed before the lecture was over that, comparatively speaking, the words were true. The great effort of the evening was his feat of producing an illumination in a glass bulb, in which a vacuum had been procured by passing a powerful and rapidly alternating current through it. The bulb was hung from a wire stretched across the operating desk and connected with the terminals of the condenser. The current was turned on and, taking a pair of forceps in his on and, taking a pair of forceps in his on and, taking a pair of forceps in his hand, Tesla approached them to the bulb. In an instant it was aglow with an intense yellow light and flashes of electricity leaped across from one side of the bulb to the other and played all over its surface. The phosphoresence of the bulb set the audience wild with delight, and Tesla was obliged to acknowledge the ovation again and again.

The experiment, "Chantom Streams," was one of the most heautiful of the many with which Tesla fairly bewitched his audience. Two heavily insulated conductors were adjusted about eight inches from one another and the alternating current turned on, when the interval was filled with a column of purple haze, and the scent of ozone and nitric acid filled the air. Another wonderful exhibition was the incandescence of a rarefied gas in long glass tubes. derful exhibition was the incandescence of a rarefied gas in long glass tubes. Making the connection with one of the terminals, and crasping it in one hand and the tube in the other, the latter was in an instant transferred into a wand of soft, opalescent light. The magician, for such he seemed to all who witnessed his exploits, then began to twirl the tube rapidly, producing a startling effect, not unlike that of a pin-wheel, but infinitely more beautiful.

Mr. Tesla stated, in introducing the subject, that it was his intention to amuse and entertain his audience, and amuse and entertain his audience, and he would refrain from much scientific explanation. He was true to his promise, and almost the whole time was devoted to experiments, all beautiful beyond description, and many of them illustrating principles that will solve great practical questions. The lecturer stated that he was sure the time would come when Niagara Falls would supply electric motive power for New York electric motive power for New Yor and Philadelphia without the aid of

A Mosquito's Armory.

A Rocheter man who has had some experience with mosquitoes, says that that insect's bill is an elaborate contrivance, consisting of two sharp saws and a lance enclosed in a sheath which is only employed as a pump. The saws are bony and flexible, and the teeth are near the end, which is point-ed. When the mosquito has selected his victim, he sings a little song in his ear, and then settles down to work. The lance is the first thing he thrusts into his victims fiesh, and the opening made by this is enlarged by the saws until it is big enough for the sheath or pump to be inserted, through which the mosquito endeavors to drain our veins. The discoverer of all this states that the irritation the victim feels when the mosquito is biting comes from the sawing, but this is probably not so. Many of us who have been bitten can testify to having felt intensely irri-tated before the mosquito has done any-thing more than sing. A Fatal Defect.

A century and a halfago wig-wearing was at its height, and little boys four or five years of age submitted to having their heads shaven preparatory to donor five years of age submitted to having their heads shaven preparatory to donning their false head-dresses. A Leydon professor—Rivers by name—shocked all churches by declaring that a Christian must necessarily wear a wig or be eternally lost. On the other hand, Dr. Thiers, a celebrated Catholic, assailed the wig-wearsng priests in a good-sized volume. The ancient Egyptians all wore wigs, and the early Christians, from A. D. 427 to A. D. 917 considered a false head-covering a badge of distinction. This, too, in direct opposition to Tertullian, who in vain declared them devices and inventions of the devil, and Clement of Alexandria, who warned his Clement of Alexandria, who warned his hearers that when the sacred hands of the clergy were laid on their heads the blessing would not penetrate through false hair.

Great Minds Think Alike. Malagasy proverbs are very much like other people's. "Birds of a feather" is "Akanga tso roa volo"—"guinea fowls of the same plumage." "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush" is "Seeing a beautifully marked guinea fowl and throwing away the fowl at home in one's house." "Union is strength" is expressed "guinea fowls in a flock are not scattered by the dogs."

Unjust Taxation.

It is unjust to tax the stomach with burthens that it cannot bear. Many silly people thus tyrannize that i 'dtaful servitor until it rebels and punishes them as they deserve Dyspepsis is usually the child of gastronomic folly, but whether this or the natural associate of inherent feebleness from childhood, it is surely and pleasantly remedible with Hostetter's Stomach bitters, the finest and nost highly sanctioned gastric tonic in existence. As a result of the tone imparted to the stomach, and the increased activity of its digestive and assimilative action, insured by the persistent use of this benign invigorant, general stamins is augmented, the nerves strengthened and tranquilized, and a tendency to innomnis and hypochondriasis defeated. Billousness, chilis and fever, rheumatism and kidney troubles are conquered by this udmirable medicine.

The Argument Used

Y the makers of the second-class baking powders to induce the dealer to push them off on Royal consumers is that they cost less than Royal and afford the dealer much more profit.

But you, madam, are charged the same price for them as for the absolutely pure Royal, which is perfectly combined from the most highly refined and expensive materials. The lower cost of the others is caused by the cheap, impure materials used in them, and the haphazard way in which they are thrown together.

Do you wish to pay the price of the Royal for an inferior baking powder, made from impure goods, of 27 per cent. less strength? If you buy the other powders, insist upon having a corresponding reduction in price.
