A Live Institution.

That Gates college, of Neligh, Neb., has steadily grown to an attendance of over three hundred is due to the thoroughness of the work done, the low rate of expenses and accessibility of location. This college has never "boomed" itself, and hence has never had any discouraging setbacks. It has always attracted young men of push and vigor who were willing to work hard and lay a thorough foundation rather than take a little smattering of several things and then attempt to convince the world that they were educated.

A number of improvements are under way this summer to make the advantages still greater.

Any one desiring to attend a school where honesty and good work are the only class distinctions, where the physical system as well as the mental is cared for, and situated in a town without saloons, will do well to write President H. K. Warren for further particulars.
