OTHER TOWNS THAN OURS. THE CHAMBERS BUGLE

Our attention has been directed to the subject of menufacturing cheese, while reading the correspondence between L. D. Richards of Fremont and G. C. Hazelet of O'Neill, as published in THE FRONTIER last week. It is evident that the establishment of cheese factories in Holt county would be a success. When we take into consideration the fact that a large portion of the country is admirsbly adapted to the dairying business, with grass in great abundance, and the water supply easy of access and inexhaustible, there is no reason why the business could not be prosecuted to advantage, and become profitable to our farmers. There are no doubt many sections of the country where an enterprise of that kind could be established successfully. Not the least of those is Chambers, surrounded as it is by a grazing country which is the admiration of every man who passes through this country. We hope that the correspondence going on in regard to the matter may result in the establishment of a factory in this town where there are a large number of cows and a population ready to give reasonable encouragement. We are glad to know that our esteemed friend Mr. Hazelet is giving some attention to that very important industry. The men who are crecting lasting monuments to their memory, are the men who are instrumental in establishing such industries as the country is adapted to. and thereby aiding in the developement of the resources of the country. Mr. Hazelet is earning for himself the respect of his countrymen for the interest taken in the prosperity of the state and especially of the county of Holt. Another enterprise which might be profitably engaged in is a canning factory. Why ship in canned corn, tomatoes and small fruit when they can be raised in the country in great abundance? With chicory and canning factories, creameries and cheese factories in operation, there would be employment for laborers, and the products of the farms could be turned to a good account and prove a source of wealth to our people.

FROM THE ATKINSON GRAPHIC.

Judging from the malodorous stench that arises from the Ham that "lles" in the sanctum of the O'Neill Independent that office should be quarantined or fumigated.

Miss Ray Davis, formerly stenographer and typewriter at the Exchange bank in this place. is now engaged in the same capagity by the managers of the world's fair, which no doubt is a very pleasant and lucrative position.

It seems that the populists did not elect a county attorney last fall. They simply elected a person to employ a lawyer to perform that duty. This is a system of economy based on a reform which only populists can construe into an art of magic retrenchment.

The Golden-McHugh-Harrinton coterie of fawning democratic sycophants have now turned their slobbering careases in the direction of Tobe Castor. Grover will have cause to congratulate himself that he has ceased to be the central object of their adulations.

PROFESSOR VIRCHOW.

Man of Science Who Possesses a Sareastie Tougae and a Hasty Temper.

Professor Rudolf Virchow, rector the university of Berlin, is a highly interesting personality. He is a small man with dry, parchmentlike skin, and wears very powerful spectacles, which gives his eyes a eculiar appearance as seen through them. The tout ensemble is very ordinary. Not only is he, however, in the first rank of scientists, but is, besides, a prominent politician, one of the most influential men among the advanced liberals and a member of the reichstag. He would long ago have been elected rector had it not been thought that his political views would be so obnoxious to the emperor as to cause him to decline to ratify Virchow's election, says Harper's Weekly. Virchow and Von Helmholz cele-brated their 70th birthday within a short time of each other, and whereas the latter received a complimentary telegram and a decoration from the emperor, Virchow was the recipient of no such favor. In the telegram to Von Helmholz his majesty expressed his approval that the scientist had devoted himself to science. which was his proper sphere, and had left politics alone. This was evidently a side-thrust at Virchow.

During the political troubles of 1842 Virchow was banished because of a speech in which he said that Prussia must have a constitution; that the king must grant one, or they must try to do without a king. For this he was proscribed, but he partly regained favor by his work in connection with the Franco-German war. His organization of ambulance corps and his untiring efforts in the hospitals were highly appreciated. He is much more liked by foreign students than by Germans. To the latter he shows his rough side. He does not approve of their drinking habits. He says that Americans and English who do not soak so systematically have clearer heads and do much better work than Germans. Some of his countrymen have such a dislike of him that they prefer to study pathology elsewhere, although they have to study under inferior men. They dread his home truths and his not always smooth tongue. He is, they say, very rude to them in his lectures, as well as severe at the examinations. He was so dissatisfied with an answer given by one student that he replied: "Any cook would know better than that. You know nothing whatever about it." To another who was turning over a specimen with an instrument so as to be better able to see it, he sneered: "Oh, yes, hack it to pieces, and by the time you have finished with it nobody else will be able to see it." A friend of mine was invited to his house to see some very rare fish which he had received a short time before. Virchow's daughter, who is not famous for beauty, was present. When the inspection of the fish was over Virchow said: "All these I'll gladly give you if you'll marry my daughter. I've been trying to marry her off these thirteen years, but without success."

The clothes that the learned professor wears are sometimes such as no old-clo' man would invest in. An especially favorite coat of his is an ancient one that has lost its color through age. On one occasion he began the examination of a student by abruptly asking: "What color is

The numerous friends of W. P. O'Brien in this locality will regret to learn that he has definitely resolved to abandon his sinces in Atkinson and permantently ate at Clearwater, Antelope county. For the last past four years Mr. O'Brien the been a prominent factor in the busi-tions direles of this place, ranking as one of the most active, enterprising and popular mecantile dealers. By fair business methods and a genial, social nature he secured not only a large local trade but he commanded liberal patronof from all sections of the country tributary to Atkinson, hence his resolution to try another and distant field in which he will prosecute the same kind. of business will not be a pleasant surprise to his broad circle of patrons in this region. However much they may demur to his departure, he will carry with him their best wishes for his success in the new field he has chosen.

FEAT OF A BERLIN CHEF. He Kills, Cleans and Cooks a Chicken

Inside of Six Minutes.

Prince Bismarck's old chef, who is now head cook in a big Berlin restaurant, recently won a novel bet and gave a surprising exhibition of his mastery of the culinary art, says a writer in the Argonaut. He had wagered $50 that he could kill, clean, cook and serve a chicken, all in six minutes. The wager was de-cided at night in the cafe of the restaurant in the presence of a big crowd. The cook appeared at 9 o'clock on an improvised platform, upon which stood a gas cooking stove. He held a live chicken high over his head, and the fowl cackled loudly. One blow of the keen carver severed the head from the neck, and the cook began to pick the feathers with great swiftness. It took just one minute to get rid of every feather. In less than another minute the expert had opened and cleaned the fowl, and had placed it upon a broiler on the gas stove. The cook busied himself at the broiler, seasoning the fowl as it cooked. It lacked just a second of the sixth minute when he stepped from the platform and served the chicken to the nearest guest amid great applause. The late Prince Ratibor was sup posed to give the best dinners in Paris. His chefs were always most solemnly chosen after the greatest deliberation and cross-examination. On one occasion it was announced that he was in need. of a cook, and ten of the best chefs duly presented themselves for the coveted post. They were informed by the prince that each must serve a dinner of his own choice and cooking, consisting of ten courses, to be served the same evening to a jury of the best gas-tronomes in Paris, who would eat of each different dish and pass judg-ment accordingly. This programme was carried out, and the palm awarded to a Frenchman who had been chef for many years to the Baron Haussmann. A trip to Masparilla may be from, it is reliable so worthy of confidence as if it e from your most trusted neighbor. If 100 courses
