

A JAPANESE ROMANCE.

A Young Portuguese Man Won and Kept His Pretty Bride.

At one time if a Japanese girl married a foreigner she was instantly decapitated. A Portuguese gentleman whom we met in Yokohama related his experience in this direction. He went there thirty years ago and fell in love with a Japanese girl. Her parents warned her of the fatal consequences of marrying him. He was a young and ardent and she romantic.

"If you agree to marry me I will die with you," he said.

"Then I will marry you, die or live," the pretty maiden said.

He was a Catholic, and he had promised his parents not to marry out of his religion.

"Will you join the church?" he asked.

"Join anything," said she; "we die together."

They eloped and visited the nearest priest, who advised them against their fatal marriage, but to no purpose.

"She cannot be baptized, confirmed and married all in the same day," said the priest.

"She must," said the lover.

"I must," said she, "for we both die to-morrow morning."

The priest waived a few customary rules to fit the occasion and performed all three ceremonies at once, and then interceded for the bride's life. The mikado decided that he would not behead the Portuguese, but the girl should die. The priest warned him, saying: "She is now a Portuguese, too, and you would better postpone the decapitation until you confer with the Portuguese government."

Time was granted. The priest persuaded the husband to plead. The Portuguese government demanded.

After a correspondence which lasted five years, and in which the British, American and other consuls or representatives took much interest, the young woman was permitted to live.

Mr. La Rosa, the happy husband, is now in business with a family surrounding him.

He, it is said, is the first European who dared to marry a Japanese.

ELEVEN TO ONE.

The Jury Could Not Agree With Themselves or With the Judge.

During a recent sitting of the assize at an up-country town in Australia the last case had been reached in due course, and the judge hoped to finish it in time to leave the town by the usual daily coach which started at 5 o'clock. Happily, the case came to an end about half-past 3, and after his honor had delivered a charge dead against the prisoner, the jury retired to consider their verdict. After about half an hour or so they returned, and the foreman imparted the information that there was no chance of an agreement.

The judge took it by no means mildly. "The case is as clear as a one as ever went to a jury." Then he recharged them violently against the prisoner. They again retired, and after some twenty minutes they returned. They could not agree. His honor fumed. What was the difficulty? They had heard the evidence. Was not the case as clear as could be? An evidently large majority of the good men and true chorused a "Yes yer honor." "We're eleven to one," said the foreman. "Why, it speaks for itself. There must be a very obstinate man among you. What is the difficulty?" asked the judge.

Eleven pairs of reproachful eyes centered themselves on a very uncomfortable jurymen. "May I explain, yer honor?" said he, at last, in a deprecating tone of confidence. "Yes, certainly—of course explain. It's as clear as a case as ever I tried." "Well, the fact is, yer honor, they other eleven wants to find him 'Not guilty,' and I'm the only one that agrees with yer honor." Complete collapse of learned judge.

Just the Man He Wanted.

A man with a thin coat and a very red nose loitered on the street and struck every passer-by for a few cents with which to get a night's lodging. A tall young man came bustling down the street. The red-nosed man stood directly in his path, and began: "My friend, I'm a molder by trade and I got sick last summer and I'm hungry and I want to get a few cents to get something to eat and a night's lodging. I've got seven cents—" "Ah!" said the tall young fellow, grasping his outstretched hand and shaking it cordially, "you're just the man I want to see. Give me a nickel, will you?" And the red-nosed man was so surprised that he almost did it.

He Assists Successful Bankrupts.

There is an individual in New York who makes a good living by dealing in securities which have a purely speculative value, and which in many cases are known to be worthless. He buys these cheap for cash and sells them to men who go into fraudulent bankruptcies and want to make a showing of assets to their creditors. He has been making money in it for years, and has had a share in filling out the schedules of a great many bankrupts who have taken advantage of his sagacity in supplying them with collateral.

Some Difference.

The street urchin left the baker's with a five-cent loaf of bread under his arm and half an hour later he returned with it. "Here," he said, laying the loaf on the counter, "me mudder's got acales, she has—see? And she says, me mudder does, dat she wants yer to know dat w'en she wants a loaf of light bread she don't want a light loaf of bread, and you got ter give de money's worth or she'll pounce down on yer, and w'en me mudder pounces down der's wool ter buy—see?" and the baker threw in four bus.

"Anthony Kent" is the title of a story by Charles Stokes Wayne, which is published complete in the December number of Tales From Town Topics. It is a highly interesting story of a strange love episode in the life of a young American in Europe, who, by becoming enchanted with an adventuress, brings endless misery upon himself. The descriptive scenes of Venice, Monte Carlo and Paris are exceptionally graphic, and as the characters are well drawn and the action of the story is very brisk, this new novel is one that cannot fail to hold the attention to the end. Town Topics Publishing Company, 21 West 23d street, New York City.

An Old Timer.

Barrett Scott left with this office yesterday quite an old relic in the shape of a newspaper, the Holt County Record, date of October 30, 1880. T. J. Smith editor and proprietor. The paper bears on its margin the address of Scott & Darr, Redbird, and makes numerous mention of old residents, some of which will no doubt interest our readers:

Frank Campbell, of Niobrara, is the democratic nominee for state senator.

Fred Everson, of Steel Creek, is the democratic nominee for representative.

Walt Townsend is running for commissioner from the Ford district.

Dave Darr announces himself an independent candidate for representative.

Just as we are going to press the news comes of the finding of the body of the son of I. R. Smith, of Leonia, who was frozen to death during the great storm of two weeks ago.

The idea of Mr. Darr running as an independent candidate gives some of the "ring outfit" the stomach ache.

It would appear from the tone of the last extract that Holt county was possessed of a "ring" even in those pioneer days, but Mr. Darr was not in it then.
