CHIPS WERE A DOLLAR EACH.

A Stinky Stranger's Mistake in Contributing to a Gospel Fund.

This story was told the writer by a friend who was an itinerant Methodist missionary. His friend was working in the wilds of Arizona a good many years ago. One Saturday evening the missionary entered a mining camp whose inhabitants had lost all track of Sunday. He went to the biggest saloon in the camp and introduced himself, telling the proprietor that the following day was Sunday and that he would like to preach a sermon to the miners. The proprietor's name was Jake.

"All right," said Jake, "we will be glad to have you. I will fix it with the boys."

He did fix it and all of the saloons were closed when it came time to deliver the sermon. The exercises were held in the big saloon and Jake made himself the master of ceremonies.
The missionary took his stand against the bar and delivered his discourse to all the idlers in the town who had collected in the saloon. At the close of his address he timidly suggested that traveling was expensive, and, while salvation was free, the gospel had to be paid for. He suggested the propriety of a collection.

"All right, parson, I will attend to that; shell out, boys," cried Jake.

He passed his sombrero through the crowd and everyone threw in a large coin, until he came to a stranger in the camp. The stranger put his hand in his pocket and felt around there for a while. Finally he pulled out a quarter and started to drop it into the hat.
Jake drew back the hat and put his hand on the handle of his revolver.

"Look a-here stranger," he said,
"chips are a dollar in this game and it is your ante."

The stranger played the limit and Jake's hand left the handle of his revolver. After that every one played the limit.

LITTLE TRAVEL ON FRIDAY.

Popular Superstition Affects Railroad and Steamship Business.

Much ridicule has been poured upon Thirteen clubs, Friday clubs and other associations formed for the laudable purpose of dealing in a practical and pleasant way with some current superstitions. General Wolseley, who in a recent pretentious military criticism included Dessaix, the hero of Marengo, among the generals who accompanied Napoleon to Russia, has written a flippant letter to a Thirteen club in London to say that he loves to cherish the pretty superstitions of his childhood. Against this false sentiment it must be said that some of the current popular beliefs are positively mischievous in many respects.

Not a transatlantic steamship company has Friday among the days of departure, and until quite recently none of the coastwise steamship lines had put the unlucky day on its list.
It would be highly desirable for the ocean mail service that some steamships should leave Atlantic ports on Friday; but while the owners are doubtless exempt from any superstition on the subject, they are obliged to defer to an absurd popular notion.
Else they would be apt to find a very small passenger list, and might possibly experience some difficulty in obtaining a crew. Railroad statistics show that there is less travel on Friday than on any other secular day of the week. Experienced travelers are so well aware of this that they sometimes do not take the trouble to secure a Pullman ticket on Friday, as they are pretty sure to find an empty berth.

A FRIEND IN NEED.

But Not a Friend in Deed, as the Smart Man Discovered.

There is a young man in Louisville who has always prided himself on being exceedingly sharp. The other day the gentleman in question boarded a Portland avenue car and proceeded to make himself at home by drawing himself comfortably up in a seat and perusing a newspaper. A few minutes later another middle-aged man entered the car, looked about him, and espied the gentleman of brilliancy. Going up to him the newcomer patted him knowingly on the back, at the same time saying: "Why, hello, Fred, don't you know me?" Fred didn't remember ever having met the gentleman, but added, as a matter of form, that his face looked familiar. At this the new-comer did become familiar. He told the young man funny stories, and by way of giving emphasis to his remarks bestowed upon the youngling sundry slaps, punches and pinches. The two parted the best of friends, but when Freddie went to bed that night he discovered he had been "slapped" to the extent of $10, "touched" for his watch, and "pinched" relative to his diamond stud. Freddie is now a sadder and a wiser man.

The Oldest British Mariner.

The "grand old man" of the British navy is Admiral Sir Lewis Tobias Jones, who recently completed his ninety-fourth year. He is a native of Sligo; entered the service when he was eight years old, and was a mid-shipman when he took part in the bombardment of Algiers in 1816. He succeeded in seniority Admiral Sir Provo Wallace of Halifax, N. S., who was more than 100 years old when he died a short time ago.

Not Worth an Effort.

At the naval academy at Annapolis they tell this story of an English professor. While marking his class at the end of a recitation, a cadet in the rear part of the room craned his neck eagerly to see what had fallen to his lot. The professor saw the movement, and, removing his glasses, said: "Mr.
Blank, your mark is entirely too small to be seen at such a great distance."

A NEW SCIENCE.

How a Man May Feel the Pain in Limbs That He Has Lost.

A well-known medical man was busy in his office when a patient called upon him who had a peculiar and interesting malady.

"Doctor, my arm twitches and aches all the time; I can feel the pain to my finger ends," he said, presenting a stump of an arm grown from the shoulder for an inspection.

"How did you lose your hand and arm?" asked the doctor.

"It was blown off in a mining accident."

"You are troubled this way often?"

"Constantly, doctor. I can at this moment feel the fingers of my lost arm contracting with pain."

"I don't doubt it," answered the doctor, calmly; "you must dig up the arm and have it burned, then you will not suffer any more."

"Doctor, you are making fun of me."

"I was never more in earnest in my life."

"I cannot find my arm. It is somewhere in Montana, returned to dust by this time."

"If that were the case your arm would not ache. As soon as that member is entirely decomposed you will lose the sense of pain. That is why I said it should be burned. There are sympathetic magnetic chords connecting it with your physical system; when every vestige of it is destroyed it will become a part of your astral body and give you no pain."

The man walked thoughtfully away, and a visitor in the doctor's office asked:

"Doctor, is that superstition?"

"No," said the doctor, in a convincing way; "it is science."

TOOK THE CAR.

How Two Englishmen Succeeded in Getting Lower Berths.

There is a decision and energy about Englishmen sometimes that arouses admiration. A case in point occurred very lately. Two men, whose clothes, monocles and accent forcibly announced their nationality, called at the ticket office of the Southern Pacific railroad at Los Angeles, and asked for two lower berths on the train to San Francisco.

"They are all gone. You can have upper, though," was the response.

"Oh, no; doncher know me friend is beastly ill, and he can't go unless he has a lower berth. He must have one, doncher know?"

The agent was sorry, but as he only had upper berths, he could do nothing.
Then the spokesman insisted on seeing Mr. Crawley, and that official again explained the absence of any lower berth, only to receive the reply:

"Aw, yes; but we must have a lower,
doncher know."

"All right, if you must, you must," answered the official. "They will cost you just $269. We have an extra car here and can put it in for you at that figure, if upper berths are not good enough."

"Aw! Yes, thanks awfully."

They paid the money, the empty Pullman was coupled onto the train, and the boys at the depot say that before the cars left the Englishmen had made the porter make up every berth in the car. They said they had paid for each of the sections and they proposed to come as near as possible to getting their money's worth.

HIS MEMORY.

Hot Shot Passed Between a Witness and a Lawyer.

Judge Tomlinson of St. Paul had the reputation of being a little slow in paying his debts. Upon one occasion he was examining a witness, and in answer to almost every question the lawyer put the reply was, "I don't remember," or "I don't know." Judge Tomlinson became exasperated, and said: "You seem to have a very short memory. Is there anything that you do remember?" "Yes, sir. I remember that a part of my father's estate consisted of a note of yours nearly outlaid. I put it in judgment, and the statute of limitations will run out in a few more weeks." There was a general smile passed through the court room, but the judge was not pleased for an instant. He said:

"Well, sir, you have by your admission a better memory than I have.
Will you explain to the jury how it happens that you were able to forget the circumstances of the case upon trial in so short a time?" The laugh was effectually turned at the expense of the witness.

Smallest Race of People.

The inhabitants of the Andaman islands are the smallest race of people in the world taken as a whole. The average height of a full-grown Andaman is three feet eleven inches and the average weight less than seventy pounds. They are very warlike, and, as they throw poisoned spears with marvelous accuracy, it is not at all strange that travelers do not care to encounter them.

Without Doubt.

Father Healey of Bray, one of the very few avowed Unionist priests in Ireland, has been known for a long while past as a wit. The other day, an ardent politician asked his reverence, "What do you think, now, father, Mr. Tim Healy will be in the first Irish parliament, lord chancellor, attorney-general, or what?" "Shure, he will be a very old man," was the reply.

On the Safe Side.

Whether an epithet is libelous or not is determined by the law alone.
There is a pleasant story of an English gentleman rushing into his friend's chambers in Lincoln's inn, and exclaiming: "Quick! quick! that scoundrel Jones is in Chancery Lane, and I want a list of all the abusive names I can call him without risk of prosecution."

BAROMETER OF THE SENATE.

If the Press Gallery Is Crowded Something Interesting Is on Foot.

The movements of the press gallery overlooking the senate chamber at Washington are doubtless the safest barometer of the importance of the doings on the floor below. If the gallery seats are well taken up something is surely transpiring in the chamber that is worth watching. If they are empty the proceedings are apt to possess no interest. The public may be mistaken and the visitors' galleries may be overflowing, but the curiosity seekers do not possess the delicate instinct of foretelling impending crises, and if the press gallery be empty, though expectancy be written on every face that peers down from the crowded balconies, no gladiatorial feats of competing oratory need be looked for, and disappointment will overtake him who disregards the signs. This was well illustrated one day last winter. When Mr. Gorman rose to reply to Senator Sherman not more than two or three heads appeared above the row of seats in the press gallery. Once or twice Mr. Gorman's eye wandered carelessly in that direction and encountered a tier of vacant seats, but he had not got far into his subject before head after head appeared over the row of desks, and, as if by some subtle magic, forty or fifty men were in their seats following the debate with close attention and mentally registering their comments on the proceedings.
Each man had come from a different direction and from every conceivable corner of the vast block of corridors and committee-rooms. No one had told them what was on. It was the indefinable instinct of impending news developments.

CHANGING A STYLE.

How White Gloves Got in Favor in New York Duedom.

One day a young New Yorker wanted a pair of evening gloves late at night, and had to go over to Sixth avenue to get them. There was nothing of his size in stock but a pair of white gloves, while pearl alone are de regueur. However, he was a dancing man and had to wear gloves, so he bought the gloves and in due course of time led the cotillon wearing them. The chappies were astounded. Nobody could question this man's irreproachable taste, and in fact, he was something of a leader of fashion. After supper a breathless deputation waited upon him to know whether or not white gloves had come back again.

"I'm wearing them myself, you see, dear boy," he said jokingly, but with a slightly superior smile. "I really haven't heard whether the prince has found it out or not."

Now your true dude is not susceptible to the influence of irony. Besides the deputation was flustered at the innovation. The result was that they mixed those speeches up, and in half an hour everybody in the room was saying that the prince of Wales had taken to wearing white gloves in the evening, and that Tom Blank was the first man in New York to hear of it.

So white gloves and not pearl are the proper things to wear in New York city on dress occasions, and when our man of fashion strolled into the Metropolitan opera house the other night and looked around the circle he smiled grimly. Half the men in the boxes looked as if they were carrying snow balls.

DIDN'T LIKE THE JOB.

The Joys of Matrimony Had no Charm for the Younger Brother.

In a Yorkshire village there lived three brothers, bachelors; the only other inmate of their household was a housekeeper. The brothers, returning home to dinner one day, found the housekeeper missing. On making inquiries, they discovered she had that morning married a farmer who lived near. It was evident there was no chance of getting back their runaway housekeeper, and equally so that they must have someone to manage their domestic affairs.

The elder brother said that the best thing would be for one of them to marry, but he added, "I shall not be that one; I am too old to marry."

"Not I," said the second one, who considered himself something of an invalid; "I shall never think of marrying."

"Ah!" said the younger brother, "I see what you are driving at. It is just what I expected, if ever there is a nasty job to do, it is always left for me."

INTER OCEAN

Is the most popular Republican Newspaper of the west and has the largest circulation. Terms by mail: Daily (without Sunday) $6 per year; daily (with Sunday) $8 per year; semi-weekly, $2 per year; weekly, $1 per year. As a newspaper the Inter Ocean keeps abreast of the times in all respects. It spares neither pains nor expense in securing all the news and the best of current literature.

THE WEEKLY INTER OCEAN

Is edited especially for those who, on account of mail service or any other reason, do not take a daily paper. In its columns are to be found the week's news of all the world condensed and the cream of the literary features of the daily. As a family paper it exceeds all western journals. It consists of eight pages with a supplement, illustrated, in colors, of eight additional pages, making in all sixteen pages. This supplement, containing six pages of reading matter and two full page illustrations, is alone worth the price of paper.

THE INTER OCEAN

Is published in Chicago, the news and commercial center of all west of the Allegheny mountains and is better adapted to the needs of the people of
