

Resurrection.
We believe that Christ was not only buried, but rose from the dead the third day. He rose with a material body identical in a true sense with the body as it was before He died, and yet omnipotently changed to incorruptibility and power, and fitted for the fullness of the Spirit and a state of glory. We believe that Christ will come again the second time in His very resurrection body, and raise up His people with a like literal real body of incorruptibility and power, controlled by the Spirit and fitted to the final state. "We look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious body." The fall of man brought ruin to body as well as soul. Salvation is not complete till body, as well as soul, is redeemed.—Church Helper.

PROBABLY you never heard of a ginger-bread barometer. A French editor has one—a General in ginger-bread. He buys one at a fair once a year and nails it to the wall at home. Damp weather softens and dry weather hardens gingerbread, and the editor can tell by touching the figure with his finger what kind of a day it is going to be.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting to the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches, and fevers, and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them, and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

THE TURKISH BATH.

Its Soothing Influence Did Not Materialize for the Man in the Street.
A solemn looking man came into an uptown Turkish bath and said he wanted to take a bath, relates the Buffalo Express. He registered, gave up his valuables and undressed. An attendant took him in hand and he disappeared into the first hot room.

Two hours later he stalked into the reception room clad in a sheet. He asked the man at the desk for the proprietor.
"I am the proprietor," said the man.

"Well, how much is this thing going to cost me?"
"One dollar, if you don't want to give the rubber anything."

"One dollar?"
"Yes, sir."

The solemn looking man grew agitated. He danced around a bit.
"Say!" he shouted, "you don't intend to charge me a dollar for that dod-blamed swindle, do you?"

"Certainly, and it's not a swindle, either. That bath was worth a dollar of any man's money."

The solemn looking man danced around some more. "Not on your life," he said. "I was swindled."

"I don't see how. You went into the hot-room, didn't you, and took a sweat?"

"Yes."
"And went into the steam room and got a shower and a steam bath?"

"Yes."
"And got a rub and scrub?"

"Yes."
"And another shower?"

"Yes."
"And took the plunge and had a dry rub?"

"Yes."
"And had a place shown you where you could lie down?"

"Yes."
"Well, what in blazes more do you want?"

"Now, see here," and the solemn-looking man spoke very earnestly: "this here is the first Turkish bath I ever took. All my life I bin rearing of Turkish baths and the luxury and delicious languor that followed them. I bin told that when a man gets through with them operations you've been talkin' about he can lay down and have the pleasantest sort of thoughts. I done all there was to do. I had reasons for wantin' pleasant thoughts. Did I get 'em? Nix. I couldn't think of a blamed thing but a note I got to meet to-morrow without no money to meet it with. Pleasant thoughts—rats! I could have thought of that sittin' in any old horse-block in town. The hull thing is a fraud and I won't pay but fifty cents."

And he didn't.

Large Gobblers.
The American bronze is the largest of all turkeys. Some of the weights attained by it are almost fabulous. Birds have been known to reach more than fifty pounds, and a "gobbler" was imported some time ago by the secretary of the Turkey Breeders' club of Petersburg which weighed forty-five pounds and was a magnificent specimen of his race. The records of the great Birmingham show tell of old turkey cocks exhibited there weighing nearly forty pounds, and hens thirty pounds, of young cocks twenty-nine pounds, and of young hens nineteen pounds; but these are birds fed up for the purpose, and are exceptional.

An Active Volcano.
"I was in Hawaii a few years ago," said a St. Louis traveler. "The feature of the island which struck me most forcibly was the active volcano of Kilanea. It is a mountain 14,000 feet high. The crater is about half a mile across, and perhaps 300 feet deep. The mass of flames and boiling fire is half a mile across. The consistency of molten matter is about that of iron running from a furnace. It foams and bubbles, and sends pillars of liquid fire 100 feet into the air. The sound of the boiling mass can be heard for miles. Rocks, heated until they look like meteors, are thrown nearly to the top of the crater."

The Mystic Plant.
The mistletoe is by no means, even in a state of nature, a rare plant. In modern times it is regularly cultivated, the viscous seed, if carefully placed in a notch in many tree-barks, sprouting with ease, though its growth is extremely slow. But trees selected for this crop are soou incapable of producing any other; for, the sap being intercepted by the roots of the parasite, the proper ripening of the fruit is prevented, and the tree is killed. Hence little by little the trade in this distinctive feature of Christmastide has been drifting over the channel, where either land is cheaper or apple trees are less valued.

Under Them Circumstances.
The tramp got away from the dog, but the dog got half of his wearing apparel as he cleared the gate.

"Why didn't you run when you see him comin'?" inquired his partner, when they had reached a safe place.

"Run nothin'," he said indignantly. "Under them circumstances what a man needs is wings."—Detroit Free Press.

When the Royal Baking Powder makes finer and more wholesome food at a less cost, which every housekeeper familiar with it will affirm, why not discard altogether the old-fashioned methods of soda and sour milk, or home-made mixture of cream of tartar and soda, or the cheaper and inferior baking powders, and use it exclusively?

Our Little Friend, the Chipmuck.

The chipmuck likes to dig his hole in these dry banks, and you may often hear a rustling in the thick beds of dry leaves loud enough to attract your attention from a distance of fifteen or twenty rods. A cautious approach to the spot will show you a couple of chipmucks chasing each other round and round through the leaves. They will cease from their sports as you come near, but if you sit down quietly they will soon conclude that you are not dangerous, and commence again. They often include the trunk of a fallen tree in their circuit, running along its whole length; then plunging like divers into the leaves, they rush headlong through them, seeking greedily to enjoy the noise and stir which they make. They play in this way for hours. If one stops, the other turns back to look for him, and away they go again. The chipmuck can climb as well as any squirrel, and frequently does so when the coast is clear, but if danger threatens he makes haste to descend. He never can realize that a tree affords him the least security. If you get so near before he sees you that he dares not come down, he plainly considers the situation to be very serious. Sometimes he will make a desperate rush for the ground within reach of your hand, and as soon as you withdraw he comes down and scampers away, evidently feeling that he has got well out of a bad scrape. Let his large cousins—red, black or gray—depend on trees for safety, if they choose; his trust is in stone walls and brush-heaps, not to mention his burrow. Within reach of these, his easy impudence is in striking contrast with his panic-stricken condition when treed.—Good Company.

A Plain Statement of Facts.

We English have not yet fully realized what utter knaves the ruling Pachas in Turkey are. We solemnly read their dispatches and their state papers as though they were not written with the deliberate intention to deceive, and we ask them to make pledges, as though they would be binding on them. So long as we regard these scamps as anything but a gang of shameless tricksters, ready to sell themselves and their country to the highest bidder, we shall vainly endeavor to handle the Eastern question. There are but two arguments which they understand—money and the stick. If we are not prepared to buy them or to beat them, we should not waste time in negotiations, but withdraw from all communication with them.—London Truth.

The Sin of the Pharisees.

A school of poor children, having read in the Bible the denunciations against hypocrites who "strain at a gnat and swallow a camel," were afterwards examined by a benevolent patroness as to their recollections of the chapter. "What, in particular, was the sin of the Pharisees, children?" "Aiting camels, my lady," was the prompt reply.

"Ah, Kate, Kate, my good wife," he said presently, "I read your riddle. God is not dead, but I have acted as though He were. You have taught me a good lesson."

And Martin Luther never forgot the lesson his wife taught him, when she showed him his black fancies in their own absurd funeral dress.

Terrors of the Simoom.

The "simoom," or poison wind, of Arabia is a serious affair to the travelers caught in it. The center of the column of wind is composed of a poisonous gas, to breathe which is death. Round this center there eddy violent gusts of heated and impregnated air, like that of a furnace. It approaches slowly, amid the whirl of air currents that precedes it for some distance. During its presence the only chance of preserving life is found in covering the face with a cloth, and lying prone on the sand, inhaling what little pure air may be found next the earth. Meanwhile, the feeling of the limbs as if molten iron was being poured over them. Camels instinctively bury their nozzles in the sand; but horses do not possess the same preservative instincts, and they perish in consequence.

The Lunar Weather Theory.

The general principles of the lunar theory as to the weather are thus stated by Claudius Ptolemy, as quoted by Mr. A. J. Pearce in his "Weather Guide Book," according to Astro-Meteorology: "The moon's course is to be carefully observed at the third day before or after her conjunction with the sun (new moon), her opposition (full moon), and her intermediate quarters; for if she then shines thin and clear, with no other phenomena about her, she indicates serenity; but if she appears thin and red, and have her whole illuminated part visible, and in a state of vibration, she portends winds from the quarter of her latitude and declination; and if she appear dark or pale and thick, she threatens storms and showers. All halos formed around the moon should also be observed, for if there appears one only, bright and clear, and decaying by degrees, it promises serene weather; but if two or three appear, tempests are indicated; and if they seem reddish and broken they threaten tempests, with violent and boisterous winds; if dark and thick they foreshow storms and snow; if pale, or black and broken, tempests with winds and snow, both; and whenever a great number appear, storms of greater fury are portended."

The most homely proverbs abound in the writings of Hesiod, who certainly did not acquire his learning from books but from the legendary lore of his countrymen. To him we owe that ancient, paradoxical proverb that "the half is better than the whole," which was the summary of the poet's advice to his brother, that it would be better to accept a compromise at the loss of half the stake than to risk a lawsuit for the chance of winning the whole.

A Banker's Trick.

Once upon a time, when Dumas, the noted French author, was short of cash, he wrote to a certain millionaire asking for the loan of some money for a few months. The letter was an extremely characteristic one, and ended with a little roudou, half jest, half seriousness. Indeed, it was such a clever production that the banker sagely concluded that the author was not to be trusted with money, and promptly and curtly declined to make the proposed investment. At dinner that night several of the banker's guests happened to be discussing a recent sale of autographs, and mentioned the almost fabulous price brought by familiar notes of Hugo, Lamartine, Guizot, and Gautier.

"Do you mean to tell me," said the millionaire, "that things of that sort have any value—money value?"

"Certainly they have!" replied one of the guests, who was a collector. "A good autograph such as I have mentioned is worth its weight in bank bills any day."

"How much is this worth?" said the banker, taking Dumas' letter from his pocket.

"I'll give you 100 francs for it this instant," said the collector, with enthusiasm, after reading it.

"Done!" said the banker, and with a pitying smile, he pocketed the money for the letter to which a few hours before he had returned a contemptuous refusal.

The Era of Muscles.

This is an athletic age. Everybody wants to be strong. The craze for it has well nigh reached that stage—effects both sexes and even childhood. The pugilistic phase of the fad in young America is by no means morbidly promising. But it is one thing to be endowed with vigor and another to be endowed with muscle. Super muscularity is largely induced by physical effort perilous to health and calculated to shorten life. The vigor which means a regular and efficient discharge of the physical functions, is the first medium at which all may safely aim without causing ruptures or breaking blood vessels. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is largely conducive to a gain in vigor of this sort, since it stimulates and assists digestion, promotes regular bilious secretion and keeps the bowels in order. Sleep, that grand recuperator of nervous vigor, is encouraged by it, and it remedies malarial, rheumatic and kidney trouble.

In France, during 1870, 1,982,620 pounds of horse, mule, and asses' flesh were sold there, as against 171,900 pounds in 1860, when the society for promoting its use was started. In some of the provincial cities the consumption has attained fairly large proportions, the number of horses slaughtered in Marseilles the past year being 1,533, or at the rate of five every working day. In Lyons about the same number were killed, despite the obstacles thrown in the way by the local authorities.

Which's Consumption Cure keeps the bowels in order. It cures Incontinent Consumption. It is the best Cough Cure. 25 cts., 50 cts. & $1.00.

It is better to fall in trying to do good than not to try.

If your mental, best and most esteemed neighbors had written the following letters they could be no more worthy of your confidence than they now are, coming as they do, from well known, intelligent and trustworthy citizens who, in their several neighborhoods, enjoy the fullest confidence and respect of all.

Mrs. F. L. Inman, of Manton, Wexford Co., Mich., whose portrait heads this article, writes as follows: "I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription about a year ago. For years I have suffered with falling and ulceration of the womb, but to-day, I am enjoying perfect health."

Miss Mary J. Tanner, North Lawrence, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., writes: "I was sick for four years. For two years I could do no work. I had five different physicians, who pronounced my case a poor or impoverished condition of the blood, and uterine trouble. I suffered a great deal with pain in both sides, and much tenderness on pressing over the womb. I bloated at times in my bowels and limbs; was troubled with leucorrhoea. I could not sleep, and was troubled with palpitation of the heart. Suffered a great deal of pain in my head, temples, forehead and eyes. I had a troublesome cough, raised a great deal and at times experienced a good deal of pain in my chest and lungs. My voice at times was very weak. I suffered excruciating monthly, periodical pains. Since taking seven bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription some time ago, I have enjoyed better health than I have for more than four years previously; in fact, for several months past I have been able to work at sewing. I have gained in weight thirty-nine pounds since taking your medicine; the soreness and pain have disappeared." Yours truly,

Mrs. Alex. Robertson, of Half Rock, Mercer Co., Mo., writes: "For twenty years, I suffered with womb disease and most of the time I was in constant pain which rendered life a great burden. I cannot express what I suffered. I had eight doctors and all the medicine I had from them failed—the one after the other.

I was nervous, cold hands and feet, palpitation, headache, backache, constipation, leucorrhoea and no appetite, with bearing-down pains. I got so weak I could not walk around. I had to keep my bed, thinking I would never get any better.

One day my husband got one of your little books and read it to me. He said there was nothing doing me any good. I said I would try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I did try it. After the first few weeks my appetite was better; I was able to sit up in bed. I wrote to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, at Buffalo, N. Y., and described my case; they sent me a book on woman's diseases. I read carefully and followed the directions as near as I could and took the medicine for two years. With the blessing of God and your medicines, I am entirely cured. That was three years ago."

Yours truly,
Mrs. Alex. Robertson

Those Pimples

Are tell-tale symptoms that your blood is not right—full of impurities, causing a sluggish and unsightly complexion. A few bottles of S. S. S. will remove all foreign and impure matter, cleanse the blood thoroughly and give a clear and rosy complexion. It is most effectual, and entirely harmless.

Chas. Heaton, 78 Laurel St., Phila., says:—"I have had for years a humor in my blood which made me dread to shave, as small boils or pimples would be cut thus causing shaving to be a great annoyance. After taking three bottles of S. S. S. my face is all clear and smooth as it should be—appetite splendid, sleep well and feel like running a foot race, all from the use of S. S. S."
