I have two little grand children who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-hours I was out of bed and doing my house work. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bon-aqua, Hickman Co., Tenn. For sale by P. C. Corrigan Druggist.

Mr. Taddles—Have you been dancing with that awful Miss Prancer this evening? "No; but I know what it means. I've had rheumatism." "Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds, croup and whooping cough in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. For sale by P. C. Corrigan Druggist.

The Why and Wherefore. There is nothing marvelous in the fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla should cure so many diseases. When you remember that a majority of the disorders "flesh is heir to" are due to impure or poisonous conditions of the blood, and that Hood's Sarsaparilla is an effective and radical blood purifier, the whole thing is explained. Besides its blood purifying qualities Hood's Sarsaparilla contains the best known aegotable stomach tonics, diuretics, kidney remedies and liver invigorants, and is thus an excellent specific for all disorders of these organs, as well as for low conditions of the system, or that tired feeling. Miss Seaside—I notice you never take any more kodak pictures. What is the reason? Mr. Topton—No one objects to it now.

SPLENDID HORSEMEN.

Magyar Calkos Equally Accomplished With the American Cowboy. Picturesquely arrayed in a white linen, wide-sleeved smock or shirt, embroidered in vivid colors, in loose white zouave pantaloons, tucked into high boots, and with a bunch of puszta grass and a peacock's or heron's feather in the band of his wide-brimmed hat, the Magyar Calkos presents the European counterpart of the North American gaucho and of the African Bedaween. His life, says a writer in the New York Tribune, is spent on the vast "puztas" or prairies of Hungary in tending the great herds of semi-wild horses, the breeding of which constitutes one of the most profitable and staple features of Magyar industry. While the summer lasts he often suffers thirst—that thirst which is one of the terrors of prairie and desert life—while his food, which he carries about with him in the little two-wheeled canvas-covered cart, which is his only dwelling place, frequently gives out, and he has to wait for many days sometimes before the purveyor of the Calkos comes on his round to replenish the stock of all the scattered members of this strange brotherhood. Courageous, robust, indifferent to both extreme cold and overpowering heat, the Calkos is, as a rule, of middle height, with well cut features, a dark skin, bright and intelligent black eyes and the long-pointed mustache known throughout all Europe as "la moustache Hongroise."

He wields the lasso with just as much mastery as does the gaucho, and, to my mind, surpasses both the latter and the Western cowboy in horsemanship. A perfect rider, he breaks in the colts belonging to his herd without the assistance of either curb, saddle, rein, bit or whip; simply slinging a rope halter over the young animal's head, he conquers him by the iron pressure of his muscular legs and the magical skill with which he poises his body on the back of the fretting, curvetting steed. The employers of the Calkos are the emperor and the great nobles. One of the favorite pastimes of the Austrian, and especially of the Hungarian, aristocracy, is horse-breeding on a most extensive scale. About four-fifths of the horses of the imperial cavalry come from Hungary, and it is estimated that with the present breeding stock that country could export from 50,000 to 60,000 horses annually. These Hungarian horses are very strong, with great stamina, and can stand fatigue combined with short rations better than most horses bred elsewhere, while as cavalry mounts they are unsurpassed. The oldest and largest stud farm in Hungary is Mezzohogyes, which comprises 40,000 acres. It was founded as a royal stud in 1785, and here for more than a century various well established types of horses have been formed by crossing different breeds, by the effect of climatic conditions, food, etc. In Hungary alone there are in all 150 private stud farms—a very good proof indeed that the government horse-breeding establishments by no means interfere with individual enterprise.

Three Lofty Lakes. The most elevated bodies of water in the world are the several lakes situated in the Himalaya regions of Tibet. Lake Manasarovara, which bears the palm for being the loftiest lake in the world, is between 19,000 and 20,000 feet above the level of the Indian Ocean. Two other Thibetan lakes, those of Chalamo and Surakol, are stated to be 17,000 and 15,400 feet in altitude respectively. For many years it was supposed that Lake Titicaca, South America, a body of water covering 4,500 square miles, and with a maximum depth of 924 feet was "the lake with the greatest altitude."

As Good as Dead. He—What's this terrible thing I hear? I am told that you are not a widow, but a married woman with a husband still living, and yet you have engaged yourself to me. She—Don't let that worry you, my love. We shall never meet him. He does not move in our set.—Fuck.

"GOD SAVE THE QUEEN."

English Soldiers Who Vocalized Their Loyalty While Fighting Vainly. Maurice Gifford sends to the Pall Mall Budget the following account of how Major Wilson and his party met their fate in their attempt to capture Lobangula. Mr. Gifford obtained the information from an Indiana of the Insuka regiment who was present at the engagement. On Major Wilson and his party returning with Captain Borrow's re-enforcements to the king's scheme in the morning they were received by a volley from part of the Inguba and Imbieu regiment, who had orders to take up their position on the road by which Major Wilson and his party would return. On receiving the volley Major Wilson retired into the bush toward the river, but he found his party surrounded on all sides by natives numbering from 2,500 to 3,000 at the very least. The orders from the Indunas to their men were that on reaching Major Wilson's party they were to shoot the horses first. This order the Matabele proceeded to carry into effect. Major Wilson's party keeping up a heavy fire all the time. The horses, which Major Wilson had tied together in a ring, were soon all shot. The Englishmen then lay down behind them and kept up a steady fire with such a good effect that they succeeded in driving off the Matabele for a short time, but re-enforcements arriving from across the river, and as far as Mr. Gifford could gather from the Induna, the fight must have lasted some three hours. A number of soldiers were seen to be wounded, and their ammunition began to run short. Then the natives gradually crept closer, shooting anyone they could. The Induna describes Major Wilson most accurately by his dress and the hat he wore, and states that he was wounded in several places and covered with blood, while another wounded man stood by his side loading rifles and handing them to him. Major Wilson and his men fought desperately to the very last. The Induna said that as the supreme moment came the Englishmen who were still able to rise stood shoulder to shoulder, took off their hats, and joined in a song, the kind of a song that he, the Induna, had heard missionaries sing to the natives. The Matabele then rushed up, and while the men were singing what we supposed to have been "God Save the Queen," they were overwhelmed by the natives and assailed. The Induna estimated that the Matabele lost eight to every one of the thirty-four white men killed, and said that Lobangula's warriors lay round the dead white men like grass.

POLICE ITEM. The Superintendent Thought He Was Too Energetic to Suit. A determined-looking man, with a nose like the beak of a hawk, a bad eye, and built all the way up from the ground like a bank safe, applied to Superintendent Byrnes for a position on the police force. He said he was from Texas and out of employment, according to the Tammany Times.

"Do you think you can make arrears, and guard prisoners so that they will not escape while you are bringing them to the station house?" asked the superintendent. The applicant smiled a smile that made even the superintendent feel uncomfortable. It was a combination Richard III and Othello in the last act smile. "If you had six prisoners, and one was to escape, would you leave the five and follow up the fugitive?" "Certainly I would; but I would shoot the other five first."

You will not do," replied the superintendent. "You are too tough for New York." The Two Magnetic Poles. Some time during the latter half of 1893 we gave a "Curious Note" entitled "The Two North Poles"—a short disquisition on the difference between the geographical and magnetic North Poles. Close investigation of the phenomena of magnetism has proven that the North and South magnetic poles are neither identical with the geographical poles, but that they are in the neighborhood of the earth's axis of rotation. In the case of the north magnetic pole the exact location is well known—at 97 degrees west longitude and 79 degrees north latitude. The location of the south magnetic pole is not known to a certainty, but is believed to be near 150 degrees east longitude and 75 degrees south latitude.—St. Louis Republic.

A Pleasant Arrangement. Sarcastic Father—Julia, that young man, Smiley, has been here three nights in succession, and it has been nearly midnight when he left. Hadn't you better invite him to bring his trunk and make his home with us? Innocent Daughter—Oh, papa! may I? It's just what he wanted, but he was too bashful to ask you. He'll be delighted when I tell him this evening.—Spare Moments.

No Cause for Vanity. "That Wardwell woman needn't put on so much airs with her diamonds," said one Chicago lady to another. "They ain't hers to keep." "Whose are they, then?" "Her husband's; and he put it in the marriage contract that she was only to have the right to wear them as long as she was his wife. He always fixes it that way."

Finishing Him Down. She—Why didn't you come around last night? He—I didn't get through at the office until so late that I hadn't time to go home to dress, and I didn't like to call in my business suit. She—Why not? Don't you mean business?—Detroit Free Press.
