Lords Elphinstone, Fitzalian and Paget

one of the very old folks in British ar stocratic society recall that befor her marriage to Prince Albert of hat a and Saxe-Coburg she had had several love affairs. Her first lover was the late Lord Elphinstone, a tall, ingularly handsome young Scottish over, who was sent to Madras as govraor to get him out of the way. Her text was Lord Fitzallan, another sixo ter, a splendid young officer of the First Life guards, afterward duke of Norfolk.

Her third lover was Lord Alfred Paget, one of the marquis of Anglesea's splendid sons, an officer in "the Blues," standing about six feet two, who is the father of Captain Paget, married to Miss Minnie Stevens, and who was then her equerry-in-chief, and has continued as equerry ever since. This love affair was regarded as so dangerous that King Leopold of Beigium, the queen's uncle, was sent The result, was that Prince Albert was sent for next. Albert was at that time, a courteous, quiet, mild, bland, accomplished prince. The affair was quietly managed by Leopold. In the court circle column the prince's name found rather a mean and minioned place, and as the prince and queen went out the evening after his arrival for a stroll in the woods, their stroll was unobserved except by the select few who were in the secret. But Victoria's maid, a mischievous, merry little elf from Longenschwalbach, and who was more excited that evening than Victoria herself--prattled to the court newsman of how Albert's meek eyes, when they returned, were radiant with joy and Victoria looked slightly flushed, and wore in her girdle a small flower-the flower of a love which, through all the darkness of widowhood, has never lost its en't believe it," was the reply, "if you freshness-and her straw cottage hat was crushed back in front. The club man calling next morning for his tea and toast and Times was startled by the announcement that "her maiesty was about to lead to the hymeneal alter his royal highness Prince Albert of Gotha and Saxe-Coburg"and thus Victoria was wooed and won.

The monkey was critically examining a peanut, wondering, possibly, whether it would be worth opening. The man laid an in-nocent looking little roll of something on the outer ledge of the cage. Last June Dick Crawford brought his Now, a monkey's curiosity is only equaled by his avarice. He will take anything in sight, whether he wants it or not. So the ring-tailed resident of the cage took this roll in. At first it was not possible to see what he had acquired, but in an instant the mystery was solved.

He placed it once to his mouth and monkey. There was just enough very palatable to him and he curled his tail, rolled his eyes upward with an agonizing look, and murmured to himself: "This is heaven to me." Chronic Nervousness Could Not Sleep, Nervous Headaches.

Gentlemen:—I have been taking your Restorative Nervine for the past three months and I cannot say enough in its praise. It has for I had almost given up hope of ever being well again. I was a chronic sufferer from nervousness and could not sleep. I was also troubled with nervous headache, and had tried doctors in vain, until I used your Nervine. Yours truly,

IMITATIONS

Cock-Crowing Contests.

A new and novel amusement has been introduced in Belgium which permits the peasants to have some sport. It is a sort of competition in cock crowing, and the game is conducted in this way. In a garden are placed rows of cages, each containing cock. Before each cage, about a yard away, stands the marker, who notes the crows of his bird. The competition lasts for an hour, and it is the cock which has crowed the oftenest that takes the prize. At the last competition a rooster crowed 131

How to Butter Thin Bread.

"I like my sandwiches with the bread cut thin," said Mr. Googleby, "but I seldom try to make them in that way myself, for they always make me angry, the bread crumbles and curls up so when I try to spread it. Mrs. Googleby has no such trouble, however, and this mornin' I discovered why; she butters the cut end of the loaf before cuttin' off the slice. Simple, ain't it, and Mrs. Googleby tells me it's as old as the hills."

According to the latest advices received from Iceland a violent epidemic of influenza is raging at Reykjavik. No papers have been published for a week, and about ninety per cent of the inhabitants are said to be suffering from the complaint. The high school has been forced to close, all the masters with one exception and almost all the pupils being attacked.

Big Russia.

The smallest of the ten governments, or provinces, of Southern Russia is more than twice the size of Wales, while the largest is little less in area than Scotland. The total area of the ten governments exceeds that of France or Spain, while the population is greater than that of Spain by about 4,000,000.

The Death of Thoreau.

When the forest-haunting Thoreau lay on his death-bed, a Calvinistic friend called to make inquiry regarding his soul. "Henry," he said, anxiously, "have you made your peace with God?" "John," replied the dying naturalist in a whisper, "I didn't know that God and myself had quar-
