AN IMPRESSIVE TRAIT.

A Queer Man Who Made a Friend by Respect for His Mother. During my bohemian days it occurred that I sat in an uptown cafe...

A wild-looking, unkempt chap, gaunt, shabby, with a four days' growth of beard, rushed in, looked wildly around and then hurried over to my companion...

"I am going to ask you to loan me $2, but don't you do it."

Then he asked me and I refused the loan, and the gaunt man went unsteadily out.

"Queer duck, that," said the man at the table with me; "always getting into scrapes, taking out opera companies and leaving them stranded. The last scrape he got into was in Montreal. He telegraphed home: 'I am in jail on a technicality, but don't tell mother.' That struck me as very funny, 'Don't tell mother.' But he was always an ill-balanced ass, anyway."

Now that thoughtfulness of his mother in the young man who wanted to borrow $2 struck me as a rather deserving trait, and I left my companion abruptly and followed him out. I saw enough of him to convince me that he was not a man of business, and not even an admirable character. However, I loaned him the $2. Since then he has been considerably in the public view in many ups and downs. But he is now the impresario of a lot of continental stars. I wish him well. Like Mark Twain I love a man who never shakes his mother. This one's name is Robert Grau.

THOUGHT HE'D FOOL PEOPLE.

One Bridegroom Who Didn't Propose to Give the Bridal Away.

They looked like a typical couple as they boarded a Chicago train at a Philadelphia station. There were half a score of friends on the platform who had come to say good-by. A few grains of rice dropped from the young man's hat brim as he entered the parlor car. He carefully escorted the fair partner to a seat. All the other passengers smiled indulgently and looked interested. Then the young man extended his hand to the young woman and said in a very loud voice and with the most commonplace formality: "Well, Miss Blank, the train is about to pull out. I wish you a very pleasant journey."

And doffing his soft hat, he hurriedly left the car. The passengers looked disappointed; the young woman looked nervous. By and by she called the porter and whispered to him. The porter nodded his head and passed to the rear of the car. He came back in a moment and said in a voice that was audible to everyone in the car, "Yo're all right, ma'am. He's in de smokin' compartment." Everybody smiled and the bride blushed prettily.

Lockhart's Joke.

Lockhart, the son-in-law and biographer of Sir Walter Scott, played a practical joke on Lord Robertson, who sent him a copy of a poem for notice in the Quarterly Review. He wrote a scathing article on the work, had it put into type, and only one copy of it printed, and that, of course, his lordship duly received, bound up in his number of the Quarterly. The review is said to have contained the famous epitaph or epigram.

"Here lies the Christian Judge, and Post Peter, Who broke the laws of God, and man and metre."

Cinderella.

The English tale of Cinderella is found in the Servian tale of Papalluga, in the German tale of Asechenputtel and in the fable of La Fontaine about the milkmaid and her pa'l. The legend of Beauty and the Beast is also found in the myths of the Hindoo, Greek and Norseman. All of these tales had a common origin in Central Asia.

MISSED A JOLLY TRIP.

But Preserved the Dignity of His Little South American Republic. Just before the Minneapolis sailed from Philadelphia for the trip which proved so successful, Dr. B. Estanislao Zeballos, the Argentine Republic's minister to this country, who had been invited to go along as a guest, walked up the gang plank in Cramp's ship yard with a servant. He was shown to the room which had been reserved for him and which, in view of the crude condition of the cruiser, consequently upon her trial trip, he found plainly furnished. He also discovered that the president of the trial board and Chairman Cummings of the house committee on naval affairs had state rooms that were somewhat more roomy and better situated, but no better furnished.

Dr. Zeballos at once declared that in his capacity as minister to the United States from the Argentine Republic he could not accept any accommodations on the ship which were not equal to those assigned to any other person, and he made a request for a better room. It was impossible for Captain Sargent to find such accommodation or to turn Mr. Cummings or any other official out of the quarters to which he had been assigned. Dr. Zeballos declared that, under these circumstances, he could not accompany the ship on the trip and would leave forthwith. The officials of the Cramp company expressed their regret very politely, and Dr. Zeballos, with servant trailing along behind him, walked down the gang plank and thus preserved the dignity of the Argentine Republic, but missed the most beautiful trial trip that has ever been made.

ONE OF PILATE'S SOLDIERS.

The Man Who Thrust His Lance Into Christ's Side.

The name of the soldier who pierced Christ's side with the spear while he was hanging on the cross has been preserved in the legendary lore of the church as Longinus. This man was one of the soldiers appointed to keep guard at the cross, and it is said that he was converted by the miracles which attended the crucifixion. The legend even goes further, declaring that he was one of the company of watchers set to guard the sepulcher, and that he was the only one who refused to be bribed to say that the body of our Savior had been stolen by the disciples. For his fidelity to this great truth Pilate resolved upon his destruction. On this account Longinus left the army to devote his entire time to spreading the gospel; but he did this without first getting permission from the government of Judea or from Rome. He, and two fellow soldiers whom he had converted, retired to Cappadocia, where they began to preach the word of God. At the instigation of some of the leading Jews, however, Pilate sent out a detachment of soldiers who surprised the deserters, who were holding a Christian meeting, and where they had three crosses set up as an illustration of the great tragedy which had occurred but a short while before at Jerusalem. All three were killed and beheaded, and their heads nailed upon the crosses and carried back in triumph to Jerusalem.

Death in a Gun Ball.

An infant daughter of John Waters, at Lancaster, Penn., met with a sudden and singular death. The child, a year old, was left in the care of her brother, six years old. They played with a small gun ball and the baby put it in her mouth. The boy called the father, who was in another room, and he endeavored to take the ball from the baby. The child, thinking he was playing, leaned back, laughed and swallowed the ball. Before a physician could be summoned the child was dead.

A Darling Bet.

Herr Heinrich Stott, a Berliner, made a bet of £250 that during the time between June 15, 1893, and January 1, 1895, he will walk through at least two countries of each of the five continents of the world, defraying the expenses of his journey with the money he earns en route. So far he has had plenty of adventures. In Algiers he was arrested as a spy, but acquitted after being detained four months in prison.

Tired, Weak, Nervous Could Not Sleep.

Prof. L. D. Edwards, of Preston, Idaho, says: "I was all run down, weak, nervous and irritable through overwork. I suffered from brain fatigue, mental depression, etc. I became so weak and nervous that I could not sleep, I would arise tired, discouraged and blue. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine and now everything is changed. I sleep soundly, I feel bright, active and ambitious. I can do more in one day now than I used to do in a week. For this great good I give Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine the sole credit. It Cures."

Lighter Mourning.

Of late years the rigors of perfume-factory mourning have been greatly modified. There is little heard nowadays of how long people should stay away from the theater after the death of a relative, or at exactly what period it is again proper to dine with "a few friends." Even a widow need no longer count the threads of white in her collar and handkerchief in mortal terror lest there should be one too many. On the whole, the tendency is a sensible one, which, in the nature of things, can hardly go too far. People suffering real bereavement are not likely to be guilty of undue levity, while no sort of hypocrisy is more hideous than an affectation of sorrow.
