SCHOOL NOTES.

BY NELLIE KILMURRY.
The officers of the Lowell club all wore serious looking faces last Monday afternoon, that day being constitution day. The different literary societies were to have drawn up and ready for adoption, the constitution and by-laws of their society. The Juniors and Philomathians were not ready with their constitutions, consequently the time was given to the Lowell club. After the adoption of the constitution, by-laws and rules of order of the society, the meeting was called to order by the vice-president, Miss Gussie Martin, and the programme was then rendered, which consisted of the following:
Biography of Lowell..... John Erwin
The Constitution..... Tennie Norvell
Song..... Flora Lowrie
American Flag..... Nellie Kilmurry
Instrumental music..... Kate Fallon
A poem from Lowell..... Minnie Adam
Chorus..... Grammar School Choir
Mr. Jackson, our county superintendent, delivered a speech on constitution which was appreciated by both pupils and guests. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Jackson by the Lowell club for his entertaining and instructive talk, and we would all like to hear him again. The visitors will show their appreciation for our exercises by soon appearing among us again.
On Tuesday morning the Lowell club held a meeting and elected the following officers: Tennie Norvell president, Will Davis vice president, Carrie Purdy secretary. Committee: Fred Kautzman, Maud Hamilton, Minnie Adam. The Philomathians will give an entertainment in the high school Monday, the program of which will be as follows:

Recitation..... Lettie Gillespie
Essay..... Mary Heimerikson
Declamation..... Parnell Golden
Solo..... Tess Sullivan
DEBATE.
Mike Sullivan..... Hellen Lowrie
Will Harvey..... Mary Keeley
Charlie Alm..... Melvina Benedict
The Lowell club will give their next entertainment three weeks from next Monday.
We were glad to welcome Frank Martin back to school again Wednesday morning.
Mrs. J. and Mrs. T. V. Golden were pleasant callers in the grammar room Monday.
The members of the Lowell club wear pretty badges. They tender to Fred Kautzman many thanks for his artistic work. He printed the letters which adorn the badges.
Tim Murphy and Gus Schlummelpfenig started to school this week. We have not very many vacant seats in our room, this we are glad to note.
"An Intra-Mural View," a very artistic brochure, has been received from the Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia, publishers of the Ladies' Home Journal. As the title indicates, the booklet gives us glimpses of the interior of the Journal's offices, and some idea of the work carried on there. The main building, entirely occupied by the editorial and business offices, was designed by Mr. Hardenbergh, the architect of the Hotel Waldorf, New York, and was completed in January, 1893.

The exterior is attractive and the interior elegantly appointed and admirably planned. The numerous illustrations, showing the commodious and well-fitted offices, and the accompanying text, giving us some insight into the work in the different bureaus, requiring a force approximating four hundred employes, indicate the wonderful success which the Ladies' Home Journal has achieved in an incredibly short time. The first number was issued in December, 1883, so that less than eleven years have elapsed since Mr. Curtis conceived the idea which has developed into so vast an enterprise. In this short time its merit and steady improvement in all departments have received such recognition that its circulation has reached the enormous average of about 700,000, the largest magazine output in the world. The brochure also describes at some length the work of printing and binding the Journal, which is carried on in a separate building. "An Intra-Mural View" will be sent to any one who will address the Curtis Publishing Company, and inclose four cents in stamps for postage.
Until After Election.
The present campaign is of unusual interest to Nebraskans. Not only will a full set of state officers be elected, but a legislature will be elected that will choose a United States senator. The State Journal, located at the capital, can give you all this news more fully and more reliably than any other paper. It comes twice a week and will be sent until after election for only 25 cents. Address, STATE JOURNAL, Lincoln, Neb.

STABLE ODORS.

They Played a Big Part in Fixing the Fourth of July.
Jefferson was fond of telling a story which illustrates in a forceable manner the importance that absurdly insignificant matters may sometimes assume. When the deliberative body that gave to the world the Declaration of Independence was in session its proceedings were conducted in a hall close to which was situated a livery stable. The weather was warm, and from the stable came swarms of flies that lighted on the legs of the honorable members, and, biting through the silk stockings then in fashion, gave infinite annoyance. It was no uncommon sight, said Jefferson, to see a member making a speech with a large handkerchief in hand and pausing at every moment to thrash the flies from his thinly protected calves.
The opinion of the body was not unanimous in favor of the document, and, under other circumstances, discussion might have been protracted for days, if not weeks, but the flies were intolerable. Efforts were made to find another hall free from the pests, but in vain. As the weather became warmer the flies grew worse, and the flapping of handkerchiefs was heard all over the hall as an accompaniment to the voices of the speakers. In despair, at last some one suggested that matters be hurried so that the body might adjourn and get away from the flies. There were a few mild protests, but no one heeded them, the immortal declaration was hurriedly copied, and, with handkerchiefs in hand fighting flies as they came, the members hastened up to the table to sign the authentic copy and leave the flies in the lurch. Had it not been for the livery stable and its contents there is no telling when the document would have been completed, but it certainly would not have been signed on the Fourth.

HE "FIXED" THE PIANO.
The Carpenter Was Given a Job and He Did His Work Too Well.
A Utica, N. Y., family changed their residence from one street to another a few days since. Among the household effects was a handsome square piano, the cover of which had in process of transportation been slightly cracked. When the tuner came he noticed the cracked cover and told the lady of the house that he knew of a man who could repair it so that it could not be noticed. There was a carpenter working about the house and as the cost of moving had been considerable the lady decided to have the carpenter do the work, and informed the tuner that he need not send his expensive expert. Calling the carpenter she showed him the damaged cover and informed him that he could easily fix it with glue. The carpenter set about his task and the lady paid no further attention to him.

A day or two later she had company and was requested to play upon the piano. Failing, after repeated and strenuous efforts to lift the lid, she was compelled to forego the pleasure of entertaining her guests in this way. When her husband came home he exercised his muscle but to no avail. After three or four trials he began an examination and found that the carpenter had labored under the mistaken notion that the lid ought not to rise, and had accordingly placed a thick coating of glue between it and that part of the piano upon which it touched. To make the job undeniably complete, he further secured it by driving a tennypenny nail through it.

SPARROW SYMPATHY.
An Instance Showing that the Birds Have It for Their Kind.
"While walking along the street in the residence portion of the city last summer," says Dr. H. D. Osterman of Chicago, "I witnessed an incident that illustrated the sympathetic nature of birds. As I was walking along I noticed a little sparrow fluttering on the ground and apparently unable to rise. I stopped and was on the point of going to it to ascertain if possible the cause of its trouble, when all at once I noticed two full grown sparrows fly down from a neighboring tree and alight on the ground near by. I watched with a good deal of interest to see what they would do. The old birds hopped around a minute or two and then one of them picked up a little bare twig about three inches long. The old bird took hold of one end of the stick with his beak, while its companion took hold of the other end in the same manner. They then approached the young bird, that still fluttered helplessly on the ground, and it caught hold of the middle of the stick with its beak. The old birds then flew up to a tree, carrying the young bird hanging to the stick between them to a place of safety."

Virtuous Indignation.
Mrs. Peters, who is older than she used to be, but perhaps not so old as she looks, was once standing in a public waiting-room with one of her neighbors and her neighbor's little daughter, when a well meaning old gentleman made Mrs. Peters angry. He spoke pleasantly to the little girl, and then, turning to Mrs. Peters, said: "Is this your little grandchild?" "Grandchild!" exclaimed Mrs. Peters — "grandchild! Does that girl look like a grandchild?"

A Dire Threat.
So far as the audience was concerned, Von Bulow always made a point of doing exactly as he pleased. On one occasion, when a Leipzig audience insisted on recalling him, in spite of his repeated refusal to play again, he came forward and said: "If you do not stop this applause, I will play all Bach's forty-eight preludes and fugues from beginning to end!"

Bryan Becomes Editor.
By a master stroke of enterprise Omaha—Herald, ever in the rank of western journalism, has the popular young congressman, J. Bryan, its editor-in-chief, taking place September 1. Mr. Bryan's political convictions are clearly and well known. The paper will thus advocate his views.
A fluent writer of vast resources a candidate at this time for election to the United States senate, his paper will be read during the coming campaign with peculiar interest. People of all parties will seek the World-Herald for political information. Its news service, too, is unrivaled, and its twice-a-week edition at $1 a copy is growing rapidly in popular favor. Greater conquests are planned, and a "trial subscription" within the grasp of everybody, even in these hard times. An unprecedented offer is now being made. The twice-a-week edition will be sent new subscribers from now to January 1, 1895, for only 20 cents. Daily edition 50 cents a month. Write to World-Herald, Omaha, Neb.
