First married man-I got to know my wife only about three months before I mine only about three months after.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of quick to notice it.

Dr. Shrady Has Been Vory Busy Since the Death of His Comrade. "There goes the man who was one of General Grant's best friends."

HE WAS GRANT'S FRIEND.

I saw a sturdy, well built man, who looked not more than fifty years old. A suit of gray covered his muscular form and broad shoulders and he wore a plain $3 derby hat with easy walking shoes. The man had a strong but good natured face and he wore a military moustache and short imperial.

The soldierly pedestrian was Dr. George F. Shrady who was one of General Grant's physicians in his last illness and who was with him when he died. But Dr. Shrady was General Grant's comrade or friend in the war as well as his physician after the war. Dr. Shrady has prospered since those early days when he first smelled pow-der under McClellan. He has a charming home in the fashionable part of New York, in which his offices are, and these are constantly thronged by the class of patients that are pretty sure to make the doctor rich in a very short time There are few more busy men to be found anywhere than this genial physician. His private practice alone would be considered enough by any ordinary man to have to attend to. Not so Dr. Shrady. In addition to attending to his practice he is consulting physician in two large New York hospitals. His services are constantly being called for by the courts to act as an expert in some case beyond the knowledge of the lawyers. He is the chief editor of a medical journal of After a man passes fifty he should standing, and at certain seasons he watch himself with great care. Nearly delivers lectures in the Medical colevery man does something ruinous after lege of New York. Dr. Shrady is one of the simplest and most democratic men in his profession and is credited with being one of the most kind hearted as well.

LED BY A CHILD. "Lean on Me, Papa, We Are Nearly Home.

What a wealth of affection a little child has for her parents! History teems with heroic sacrifices that they have done for father and mother, and well that it does, for they deserve it. A little incident occurred upon a Philadelphia street car the other night that brought this thought forcibly home to the minds of passengers. Stopping at Arch street a little girl helped her father to his seat. He was a big, powerful man who would not under ordinary circumstances need any assistance of this nature, but upon this occasion he had tarried too long at a near-by saloon. He was very much under the influence of liquor. As they sat in the car, one of the little girl's hands stole quietly into the broad palm of her father. A tear stood in either eye, for she knew her mother was worrying at home. A sick baby had forced her to remain while the daughter was dispatched after the erring parent. After going several squares the little girl motioned to the conductor to stop the car. He did so. She tugged at her father's arm and aroused him from his drunken stupor. "Come, papa," she said, "we must married her. Second ditto ditto-And get out here. We are nearly home." The father pulled himself together and started to alight. It was a hard task for him and the little one was

Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious "Lean on me, papa," she bravely time of it. He took such a severe cold said, as she took hold of his arm. And nearly borne down by the weight, the father was enabled to reach the street safely. The car passed on. Tears stood in the eyes of the passengers, as they quietly watched the pair pass bad colds followed his example and half out of sight in an adjoining street.

FATE OF TWO SPARROWS.

They Were Guying People on a Steamship When Something Happened.

Two impertinent sparrows met a curious and untimely death in the presence of an interested New York crowd a few days ago. One of the Cunard steamships was being warped in to her dock while crowds of people on the pier and the vessel were chafing at the delay and slowness of the tedious process. A thick hawser fastened to a capstan near the bow was being used in the warping process and was stiff as a pole under the tremendous strain.

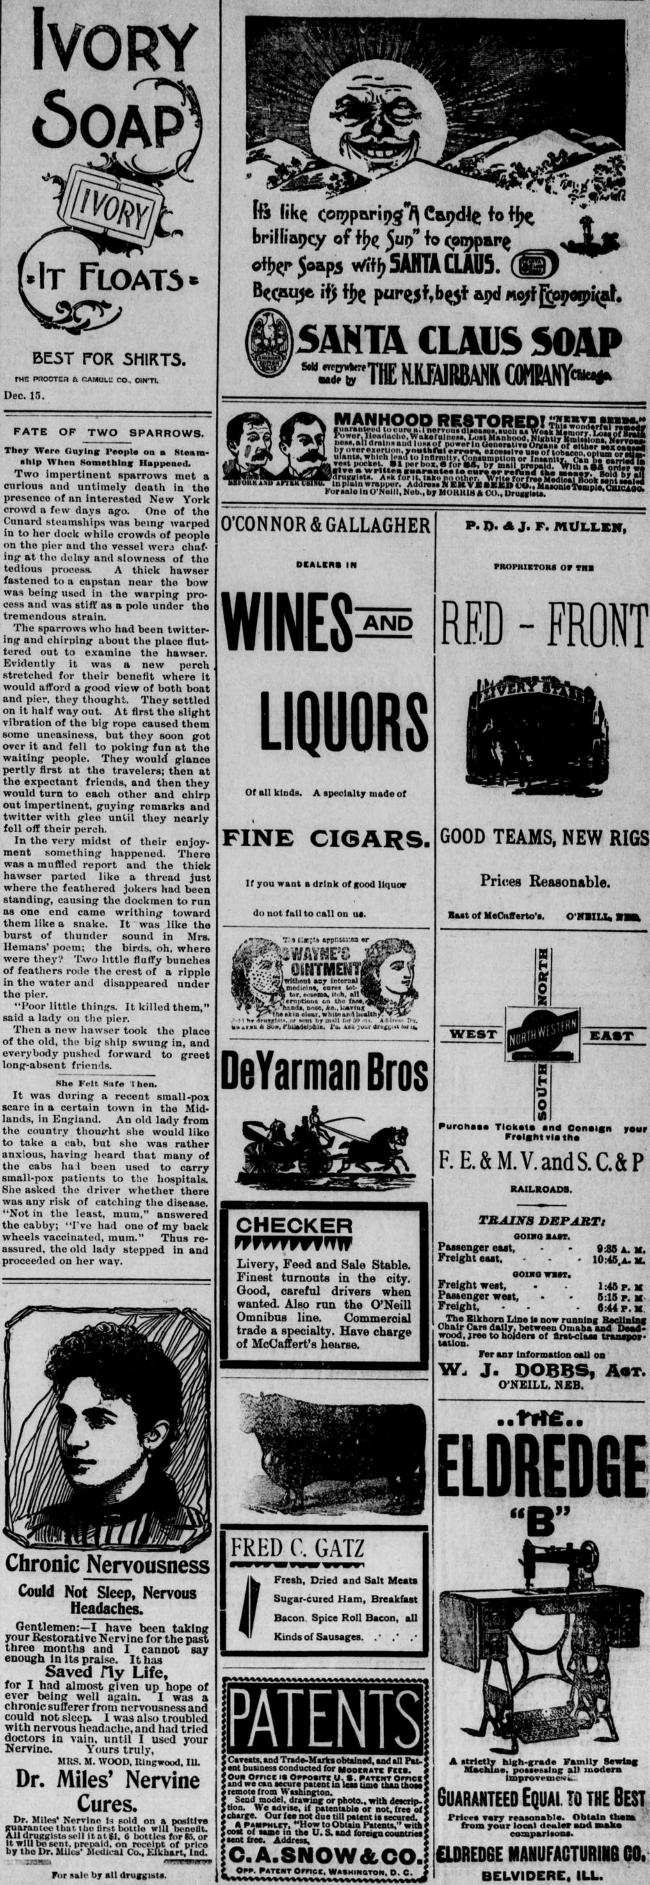

The sparrows who had been twittering and chirping about the place fluttered out to examine the hawser. Evidently it was a new perch stretched for their benefit where it would afford a good view of both boat and pier, they thought. They settled on it half way out. At first the slight vibration of the big rope caused them some uneasiness, but they soon got over it and fell to poking fun at the waiting people. They would glance pertly first at the travelers; then at the expectant friends, and then they would turn to each other and chirp out impertinent, guying remarks and twitter with glee until they nearly fell off their perch.

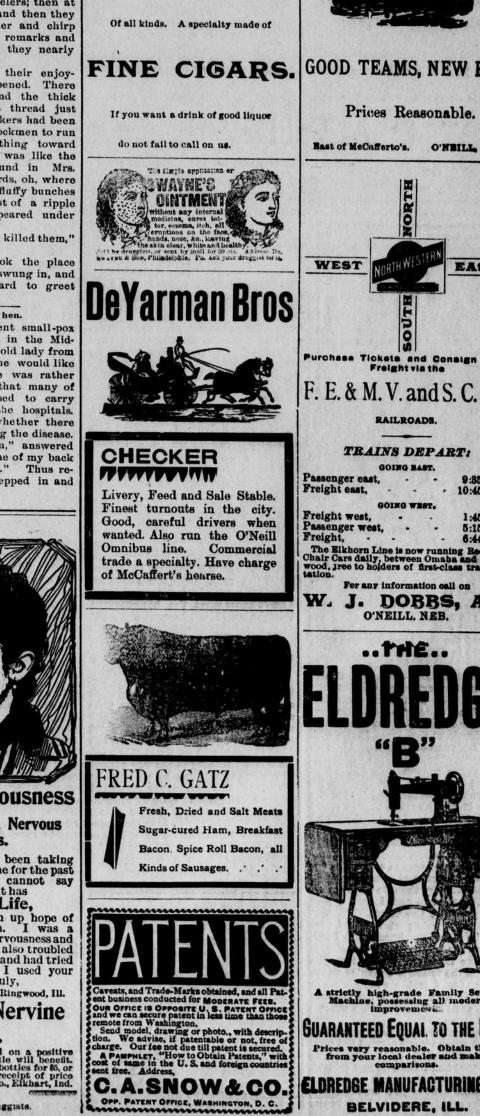

In the very midst of their enjoyment something happened. There was a muffled report and the thick hawser parted like a thread just where the feathered jokers had been standing, causing the dockmen to run as one end came writhing toward them like a snake. It was like the burst of thunder sound in Mrs. Hemans' poem; the birds, oh, where were they? Two little flaffy bunches of feathers rode the crest of a ripple in the water and disappeared under the pier.

"Poor little things. It killed them," said a lady on the pier.

Then a new hawser took the place of the old, the big ship swung in, and everybody pushed forward to greet long-absent friends.

Mexico's Greatest Need.

Says an American business man who has been living in Mexico. "What Mexico most needs is education. The ignorance of the peons is astonishing. If the great churches of America, which are yearly sending millions of dollars to China and Africa to educate the heathen there, would devote a fair portion of that money to Mexico, far more good would be accomplished. The money would be better spent and results more apparent. The few missionaries in that country are doing good, but their number is not sufficient. Then, less theology and more liberal education should be taught, and sectarianism should not interfere with the work. Strange as it may seem, the English tongue has displaced the French as a foreign tongue, and is rapidly being learned by the younger natives. No Trouble to Remember It.

"The password is Saxe. Now don't forget it, Pat." said the colonel just after the battle of Fontenoy, at which Saxe was marshal. "Sacks? Faith, and I will not. Wasn't my father a miller?" "Who goes there?" cried the sentinel after the Irishman had yell replied: "Bags, your honor!"

It scare in a certain town in the Midlands, in England. An old lady from the country thought she would like to take a cab, but she was rather anxious, having heard that many of the cabs had been used to carry small-pox patients to the hospitals. She asked the driver whether there was any risk of catching the disease. "Not in the least, mum," answered the cabby; "I've had one of my back wheels vaccinated, mum." Thus reassured, the old lady stepped in and proceeded on her way.
