

ON THE TURF.

PLACED IN LESS THAN 10 MINUTES.

Records Lowered by Does His Great Work With a Strong Wind

It in 1:58 1-4.

Ohio, Oct. 6.—Flying yesterday against the wind record of 2:01 1/2 by Westmont at Chisalsbury, the owner drove out Jib and a run-

that Jib went and the more remarkable when the wind caught the horse back stretch at the first half of the heat

COURT MARTIALED.

er's Army of the Tennessee Strips Up Veterans. Oct. 6.—It is possible that the powers of Europe must soon interfere in China, but Japan, in her present mood, will pay no heed to any representations made by the powers unless they shall be accompanied by the tangible evidence of intention to back them up.

Howard is quoted as having commented on Colonel Barber's scathing terms, in speaking of officers and the committee.

of the Civilized Tribes. Oct. 6.—According to bulletin just issued the population of the five civilized Indians in the Indian territory, of which 57,000 are

Oct. 6.—It is announced Lyman Trumbull is in with the Populist party, deliver an address at one of meetings in Central Music Saturday night.

Oct. 6.—Through its Democratic circles it is field by petition representing the views of the so-called Democrats. Under the 500 signatures are necessary

Oct. 6.—The Fifth Democratic congressional conference after a hard fight by Democracy, endorsed W. A. Trumbull as Populist nominee for

MRS. DRAYTON WILL FIGHT.

The Divorce Suit Involving One of the Astors to Be Bitterly Contested.

New York, Oct. 6.—Mrs. J. Coleman Drayton, formerly Miss Carrie Astor, to-day made her first public statement regarding the divorce suit against her through her counsel, Robert A. Shipman.

The long delay in filing an answer to Drayton's suit for divorce caused many reports that the case would go by default, which would mean an admission of the charges against her.

Mr. Shipman outlined to-day what will be said in the answer, and added a positive statement the suit will be vigorously contested. "Mrs. Drayton will certainly file a reply to her husband's suit," said he.

The attorney declined to state when the reply would be filed, but added: "It will not be October 6, nor will we be in default. In cases of this kind counsel always arrange between themselves for the filing of all necessary papers. This is a case that will be settled in the courts."

Drayton is living quietly at Bernardsville, N. J., with his children, having spent the summer at Bar Harbor. Mrs. Drayton is supposed to be in Paris. The Astor family is scattered about at various resorts.

Rebellion in China. LONDON, Oct. 6.—Reports have reached Tien Tsin, China, that a rebellion has broken out in the province of Mongolia. Troops from Peking have been sent to quell the uprising.

Serious troubles are said to have arisen within the palace at Peking, as the result of intrigues to secure the abdication of the emperor and the succession of Prince Kung's son.

A number of Europeans from the outlying districts are arriving in Tien Tsin, the foreign residents of which place are taking every precaution against an anticipated attack. The position is so alarming that all foreign women and children, including the families of members of the customs service, have been ordered to leave forthwith.

The British consuls at Ninpo and Hankow sent alarming dispatches to the government on Tuesday and Wednesday, reporting disturbances in those places and stating that the European residents were in peril.

The Manchester Guardian declares to-day that the powers of Europe must soon interfere in China, but Japan, in her present mood, will pay no heed to any representations made by the powers unless they shall be accompanied by the tangible evidence of intention to back them up.

The Globe in an article referring to yesterday's ministerial council ridiculed the idea that it was summoned merely for the purpose of sending warships to protect the lives and property of British residents in China and expresses the opinion that the Manchester Guardian's article of today gives the real reason for the meeting of the ministers.

PARIS, Oct. 6.—The Gaulois, commenting on the British cabinet council held yesterday, asks if British intervention in the Korean trouble might not constitute a repetition of the famous coup of 1873, which enabled Admiral Lord John Hay to take possession of the island of Cyprus.

The Figaro, referring to the same subject, remarked: "The British once landed in China, would not be able to resist the desire to exercise pressure upon the Japanese in order to prevent them from deriving all the advantages of victory. The troubles may then commence, and the peace of Europe will then be threatened, for Russia, France and even America will certainly intervene."

INDIANS AS CITIZENS. ARDMORE, I. T., Oct. 6.—In a ruling rendered in a case in court in South McAlester, Judge Stuart says that an Indian who has taken the oath of allegiance to the United States becomes in every sense a citizen of that government without depriving him of any of the advantages or acquirements of Indian citizenship.

BURIED IN A WRECK. Three Lives Lost in an Accident on the Frisco Road.

CARTHAGE, Mo., Oct. 6.—An accident on the Frisco railway occurred yesterday morning, resulting in the loss of three lives at Smithfield, eighteen miles west of Carthage. Freight No. 23, which consisted of seventeen cars of merchandise, was running at high speed and when just beyond the switch the engine jumped the track and was turned over and beneath it were the bodies of Mike Ketchum, engineer; Charles Warren, fireman, and Hummel, brakeman. Six cars were entirely demolished.

PROFESSOR SWING IS DEAD.

The Famous Chicago Divis Has Gone the Way of All the Earth.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Professor David Swing died at ten minutes after 8 o'clock last night of blood poisoning, brought on by an attack of jaundice.

Professor Swing was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, August 23, 1830, at which place his father was engaged in the steamboat business. At the age of 18 the boy entered Miami university at Oxford, Ohio, from which institution he graduated in 1852.

Sympathy at first was strongly on the side of Mrs. Glennan. Yesterday afternoon, however, the surgeon filed out his suit for divorce, in which he made very serious charges. He headed the raid on the boarding house and claimed to have found Mrs. Glennan occupying a bed with a man whose acquaintance she made in Virginia a few weeks ago.

NEBRASKA SUES FOR $250,000. Ex-State Treasurer Hill Files His Answer to the Complaint.

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 5.—In the case of the state of Nebraska against John E. Hill, ex-treasurer, and his bondsmen, to recover $250,000 on deposit in the Capital National bank at the time it failed, issue was joined yesterday by the filing in the supreme court of the defendant's answer.

Hill received from Willard, who preceded him, the funds of the state in checks, drafts and certificates of deposit, and did not receive in actual money to exceed $3,250. Willard had the funds deposited in the Capital National bank to his credit as treasurer, and when he turned over the office to Hill turned over the certificates of deposit among others. The answer declares that Hill never collected or received in actual money to exceed $5,000.

JIM CORBETT'S BLOOD IS UP. He Posts His Money for a Fight With Bob Fitzsimmons.

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—William Brady, Corbett's manager, telegraphed the New York stakeholder to transfer the $1,000 deposited with him in behalf of Steve O'Donnell to Corbett's name, to cover the deposit made by Fitzsimmons for a fight with the champion. This amount, $9,000 to be deposited with David W. Blanchard of this city, will make up the $10,000 mentioned by Corbett in his ultimatum.

MORTON ACCEPTS. The Ex-Vice President Notified of His Nomination for Governor.

RHINECLIFF, N. Y., Oct. 5.—Ex-Vice President Morton was yesterday officially notified of his nomination as Republican candidate for governor.

Several changes are to be made in the Northwestern Catholic diocese. Archbishop Ireland is to have a coadjutor.

WOOD E. THOMPSON, ex-superintendent of public instruction of Arkansas, died of paralysis.

LITTLETON HULETT, an itinerant Methodist preacher, and James Scott, a farmer near Mount Vernon, Ill., killed each other in a fight over an order by Scott to Hulett to leave his place.

A passenger train struck a large wagon with a ton of smokeless powder in it in a suburb of Wilmington, Del., and destroyed the wagon. Fortunately the powder did not explode.

Several changes are to be made in the Northwestern Catholic diocese. Archbishop Ireland is to have a coadjutor.

WOOD E. THOMPSON, ex-superintendent of public instruction of Arkansas, died of paralysis.

LITTLETON HULETT, an itinerant Methodist preacher, and James Scott, a farmer near Mount Vernon, Ill., killed each other in a fight over an order by Scott to Hulett to leave his place.

A passenger train struck a large wagon with a ton of smokeless powder in it in a suburb of Wilmington, Del., and destroyed the wagon. Fortunately the powder did not explode.

Several changes are to be made in the Northwestern Catholic diocese. Archbishop Ireland is to have a coadjutor.

WOOD E. THOMPSON, ex-superintendent of public instruction of Arkansas, died of paralysis.

LITTLETON HULETT, an itinerant Methodist preacher, and James Scott, a farmer near Mount Vernon, Ill., killed each other in a fight over an order by Scott to Hulett to leave his place.

A passenger train struck a large wagon with a ton of smokeless powder in it in a suburb of Wilmington, Del., and destroyed the wagon. Fortunately the powder did not explode.

INVOLVED IN A SCANDAL.

Ex-Congressman Bayner's Daughter Defendant in a Divorce Suit.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—At 1 o'clock yesterday morning four men broke into a boarding house on Eleventh street and carried away the little sons of Surgeon Glennan, of the Marine corps. The mother aroused the neighborhood with her screams.

Sympathy at first was strongly on the side of Mrs. Glennan. Yesterday afternoon, however, the surgeon filed out his suit for divorce, in which he made very serious charges. He headed the raid on the boarding house and claimed to have found Mrs. Glennan occupying a bed with a man whose acquaintance she made in Virginia a few weeks ago.

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURALISTS.

Some Up to Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture Viticulture and Floriculture.

Britons Investigate Irrigation. A Wyoming bulletin says: On Dec. 23, 1884, the British government appointed a royal commission on water supplies and irrigation.

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

the public treasury. The success of this method of reclaiming the lands in Victoria is shown by the following statement: "When it is recollected that the first trusts in the colony were not formed until 1882, and the first irrigation trust not until 1884, the progress that has been made may be estimated in a general way from the fact that there are now twenty-four 'water trusts' covering an area of 6,300,000 acres, and six irrigations trusts covering an area of 356,750 acres, in addition to fifteen applications for the constitution of new irrigation trusts which will cover nearly 3,000,000 acres more."

IN WYOMING. So far as we have proceeded in this matter as a state, we have made no mistake in our legislation. We have observed the fundamental principles which underlie the problem, and are now the admiration of the students of the problem of irrigation in the west.

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."

On the subject of irrigation in Italy, the British commission makes the following statement: "In the first place, it is important to note that almost all the irrigation canals in Piedmont and Lombardy now belong to the state, and the fact is all the more striking when it is remembered that a majority of them were originally constructed by private enterprise."